Joint U.S.-Soviet space mission set to begin

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts, cosmonauts, spaceships and rockets are ready for the joint U.S.-Soviet space mission that gets under way Tuesday, ending the space race that began 18 years ago with the launching of Sputnik.

Countdowns ticked away smoothly on two continents today for twin launchings that will propel the American Apollo and Russian Soyuz spacecraft into orbit for a historic linkup Thursday.

The Soyuz, guided by cosmonauts Alexei A. Leonov and Valeri N. Kubasov, will blast off at 8:20 a.m. EDT from the Baikonur Cosmodrome on the edge of a central Russian desert 1,400 miles southeast of Moscow.

Apollo astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton will take off from Cape Canaveral 7½ hours later at 3:50 p.m. to begin a celestial chase that will end with the two ships joined together 140 miles above West Germany at 12:15 p.m. Thursday.

Three hours later, a tunnel connecting the vehicles will open, and American commander Stafford and Soviet commander Leonov will shake hands.

It will be an emotionally charged moment, not only because of its symbolism but because the two men — both veterans of space — have become such close friends during two years of training for this mission. Both believe that moments like this, high in space, can speed detente between Soviets and Americans on earth.

The two commanders spoke by long distance telephone Sunday.

Stafford said Leonov and Kubasov told him "that everything was real fine at the Soviet cosmodrome" and he told the cosmonauts that things were good at the Cape, except for "sweating out" the weather.

Meteorologists say the afternoon thunderstorms that have swept the Cape daily are a matter for concern, but "the amount of thunderstorm activity is expected to decrease by Tuesday."

Chester M. Lee, NASA's program director, held a 2½-hour readiness review Sunday and reported: "We are satisfied we are ready to carry out our part of the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project mission."

From Baikonur the report was the same: "All activities are being carried out according to the time line of the prelaunch flight plan."

President Ford, Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, other diplomats and James Fletcher, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, plan to watch televised coverage of the Soviet launching at the State Department auditorium. Dobrynin and Fletcher will then fly to Cape Canaveral to see the Apollo launch.

Today, all five spacemen planned to check flight plans and brush up on the language of the other country. The astronauts are scheduled to fly proficiency runs over central Florida in T38 jets.

During two days of linkup in space, the astronauts will speak Russian and the cosmonauts English. They will visit each other's spaceships, share meals, conduct joint experiments and exchange gifts.

All five say that their orbital meeting won't just be a "handshake in the sky" but a mission leading to future cooperative flights in large space stations and perhaps to the planets.

17 hurt, 3 seriously

MRMP grants low

COLUMBIA — Grants for the 1975-76 fiscal year through the Missouri Regional Medical Program have been announced. Four grants were awarded programs in Southeast Missouri.

Total funds provided the Regional Medical Program by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare were only $1,535,489 for the 1975-76 fiscal year -- substantially below the amount requested by the Regional Medical Program.

The Emergency Ambulance Technicians project of Sikeston, directed by William Sikes, Scott County Reorganized District No. 6, was allocated $1,541.50.

Other grants awarded in Southeast Missouri include, Bootheel Emergency Care System Implementation of Malden, $9,568.50; Emergency Ambulance Technician Project of Malden, $1,170; and Effective Utilization of Hospital Personnel program at Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau, $17,878.

As a result of the decrease in total funds, the Missouri Regional Medical program was able to fund projects only for a six-months period, unless additional funds are received.

In addition, HEW has restricted use of the funds to prohibit funding of any new projects. A new federal law mandates the setting up of one or more "health system agencies" in each state to replace regional Medical programs. At present, the only step completed in setting up health systems agencies in Missouri has been the designation of boundaries for the Health Service areas.

At its July 3 meeting, the executive committee of the Missouri Regional Medical Program approved six-month allocations.

Trooper wounded making arrest

PORTAGEVILLE--Two brothers, James Flowers, 36, and Barney D. Flowers, 19, of Wynnburg, Tenn., who are suspected of shooting State Highway Patrol Corporal Herbert A. Campbell Sunday night and taking part in an armed robbery Saturday night in Hayti, are in New Madrid County jail at New Madrid.

A third brother, Danny Lee Flowers, 21, of Wynnburg, also suspected in the armed robbery, is in the Pemiscot County jail in Caruthersville.

Apprehension of the three ended an 11-hour manhunt, following an armed robbery at 10:30 p.m. Saturday at the Phillips 66 Service Station at the junction of Highway 84 and Interstate 55 at Hayti.

Campbell, of Portageville, was shot twice in the upper right arm and once in the right side about 8:55 p.m. as he was in the process of arresting James and Bernie Flowers at the Mississippi River ferry crossing, 15 miles east of town at the end of Route 62.

Campbell is listed in satisfactory condition today at Methodist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. following surgery for the removal of bullets.

According to the highway patrol, three men fled from the holdup scene Saturday night in a brown Mustang. They were traveling east on Highway 184 and were seen crossing the levy at Caruthersville.

Caruthersville police later found the car abandoned where the men had apparently gone into a wooded area near the Caruthersville ferry landing.

At 11:50 p.m. a search was started in the area by Hayti and Caruthersville police departments, Pemiscot County Sheriff's Department and the highway patrol.

Danny Lee Flowers was apprehended at 1:50 a.m. Sunday by the highway patrol.

Police and the highway patrol, assisted by the patrol spotter plane which arrived at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, continued an all-day search until about 4:30 p.m.

The Pemiscot County Sheriff's Department notified taxi companies to contact the department, should anyone seek a ride to the ferry crossing.

At 8:25 p.m. Sunday, Froggy's Taxi Co. at Caruthersville called the department and said two men were being taken to the Tiptonville ferry crossing, east of Portageville.

Campbell arrived prior to the taxi and when the men were let out he approached them and asked their names. One man replied, "Flowers."

Campbell then placed them under arrest and while he had the men leaning across the patrol car attempting to handcuff them, James Flowers pulled a gun and began shooting.

Campbell was knocked down into weeds on the right side of the patrol car. A ferry boat employe, Robert Wesley Riley, 30, of Tiptonville, Tenn. obtained a gun and came to the aid of Campbell.

Shots were exchanged between Riley and James Flowers and between Campbell and Flowers. Neither Riley nor Flowers were injured. Campbell ordered the men to surrender, which they did.

New Madrid County sheriff's deputies C.B. Crouthers and Fred Roe took the Flowers brothers to the Portageville police station. The brothers were later taken to the New Madrid County jail by Roe and state trooper Gene Cox.

Armed robbery charges have been filed against the three men

Nine people were injured in two accidents in Sikeston over the weekend, according to police.

Five people were injured at 10 p.m. Saturday when two cars collided at the intersection of West Malone Avenue and Stoddard Street.

Injured were the driver of one car, James Ben Blanton,69, 205 N. Stoddard St., who was hospitalized with chest injuries and is scheduled for release today; the driver of the other car, Lou Ella Tucker, 57, of 308 Westgate St., who was taken to the emergency room for observation; and passengers in her car, Barbara Tucker, 24, Sikeston, treated for bruised elbow and hips, Mae Tucker, 34, of Chicago, treated for bruises and Lolita Tucker, 5, taken for observation.

Police said the incident occurred when Blanton, northbound on Stoddard, stopped at the stop sign and then proceeded across Malone Avenue, striking the Tucker car in the driver's side.

Blanton was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

Four teen-age boys were injured at 9:35 a.m. Sunday when the pickup truck they were riding in overturned on a sharp turn on a field road at the Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Grounds.

Treated and released were the driver, Craig Littleton, 16, of 211 S. Prairie St., and passengers Earnest Roy Riley, 16, of Route Four, and James McAffee, 15, of 309 Virginia, they were all treated for minor injuries and released.

Another passenger, Thomas Medelberg, 15, of 130 Autumn Drive, was hospitalized with a mild concussion and is expected to be released today.

Ross sentenced in assault case

CHARLESTON — Robert Ross, 24, of San Diego, Calif. and formerly of New Madrid, was sentenced in Circuit Court this morning to 10 years in custody of the State Department of corrections on a felonious assault charge by Special Judge Stanley Grimm of Cape Girardeau.

Ross, who entered a voluntary plea of guilty to today's charge, is presently serving consecutive sentences of 25 years for felonious assault and 30 years on an armed robbery charge assessed May 24, 1975. The additional 10 year sentence will also run consecutively.

In the change of venue case from New Madrid County, Ross pleaded guilty to the Dec. 4, 1973 assault with a gun on Willie Gilespie of Sikeston Route Four, a bus driver for the state school of retarded children in Sikeston.

Gilespie was making his bus run Dec. 4, 1973 and stopped at E. C. Beary Grocery and Service Station near Kewanee while an armed robbery was in progress.

Gilespie was made to lie on the floor of his bus by Ross, who came out of the store and boarded the bus. Gilespie was shot in the mouth.

Robert Ross, Calvin Ross of St. Louis and Charles Williams of New Madrid have previously been found guilty in jury trials in Mississippi County Circuit Court on armed robbery charges and another felonious assault charge which stemmed from the assault with a gun on Willie Hardin of rural New Madrid.

Harden, who was left in charge of Beary's store the day of the robbery, was severely beaten about the head and shot once above the right eyebrow, which resulted in the loss of sight in the right eye.

Calvin Ross has also been assessed 65 years for his part in the assaults and armed robbery. Williams, who served as a "lookout" or "wheel man" during the incident is serving a 14-year sentence assessed by a Mississippi County Circuit Court jury may 24, 1974.

Hearnes warns party

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A crowd of Missouri Democrats listened to an hour's worth of criticism of Republicans Saturday night, but then was brought back to reality by former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes when he said his party faces "a very difficult fight" next year.

Although he was not part of the formal program for the Democrats' fund-raising barbeque here, the candidate for the party's U.S. Senate nomination approached the microphone at the request of James Spain, state committee chairman.

"If you leave here thinking 1976 is a shoo-in, you're kidding yourselves," Hearnes told the silenced crowd. "We've got to fight, and we've got to fight hard."

Most of Missouri's statewide elected officials and three congressmen occupied the platform when Hearnes made his remarks. Two of them, Congressmen James Symington of St. Louis County and Jerry Litton of Chillicothe, are considered to be Hearnes' opponents in the race for the seat now occupied by Sen. Stuart Symington.

Hearnes was not given a seat on the platform, but sat in the rear of the audience throughout the program, which amounted to a series of criticism of Republicans in the state and national administrations.

In addition to Symington and Litton, speakers included former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, Treasurer James Spainhower, Rep. Richard Ichord, state Senate President Pro Tem William Cason and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt.

Rabbitt, 39, surprised no one when he announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. He said he will file for the nomination during the first week of August.

But it was Hearnes, a former tow-term governor, secretary of state and state representative, who gave the estimated 1,500 persons some food for thought.

"I was told I couldn't be on the platform since I was a candidate," Hearnes said. "Well, that's all I've heard is candidates making speeches."

Hearnes, who is under investigation by a federal grand jury in Kansas City, said the party must be careful to nominate a good presidential candidate next year, rather than making the mistake of 1972 when Sen. George S. McGovern headed the party's slate.

The former governor told Cason, who is a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, "You know the candidate is going to have to work like you know what to beat my successor," referring to incumbent Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth is expected to be the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate. Hearnes called Danforth "old spot," referring to the blond streak in Danforth's otherwise dark hair.

"He won't be easy. He's been sheltered by the press and has all the money he needs," Hearnes said.

Party officials said about 1,600 persons paid $5 each for the dinner of pork steak, cole slaw and over-peppered green beans.

The barbeque was designed to help reduce the state Democrats' debt, reported to be about $25,000 as of June 30.

Man hurt by steer

A Blodgett man was seriously injured about 4 p.m. Saturday, when he was kicked by a Charolais steer at Beck & McCord Auction Co., East of Sikeston.

Oral D. Yancy, 42, of Blodgett, was treated at Missouri Delta Community Hospital and transferred to a Memphis hospital with a skull fracture.

Yancy, a part-time employe of the auction company, was driving the cattle from the auction company, was driving the cattle from the auction ring to the pens when he was kicked in the head and stomach.

Grows her own

Although there are many fine gardens in Sikeston, Mrs. Johnnie Templeton, 211 Daniel St., grows some of the finest tomatoes in the area. Shown here picking some of her Big Boy Reds, which last year topped the scales at over three pounds, Mrs. Templeton also grows Lima beans, purple hull and yellow hull peas and German pink tomatoes. She has high hopes for this year's yield. (Daily Standard photo)

9 hurt in 2 city traffic accidents

Nine people were injured in two accidents in Sikeston over the weekend, according to police.

Five people were injured at 10 p.m. Saturday when two cars collided at the intersection of West Malone Avenue and Stoddard Street.

Injured were the driver of one car, James Ben Blanton,69, 205 N. Stoddard St., who was hospitalized with chest injuries and is scheduled for release today; the driver of the other car, Lou Ella Tucker, 57, of 308 Westgate St., who was taken to the emergency room for observation; and passengers in her car, Barbara Tucker, 24, Sikeston, treated for bruised elbow and hips, Mae Tucker, 34, of Chicago, treated for bruises and Lolita Tucker, 5, taken for observation.

Police said the incident occurred when Blanton, northbound on Stoddard, stopped at the stop sign and then proceeded across Malone Avenue, striking the Tucker car in the driver's side.

Blanton was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

Four teen-age boys were injured at 9:35 a.m. Sunday when the pickup truck they were riding in overturned on a sharp turn on a field road at the Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Grounds.

Treated and released were the driver, Craig Littleton, 16, of 211 S. Prairie St., and passengers Earnest Roy Riley, 16, of Route Four, and James McAffee, 15, of 309 Virginia, they were all treated for minor injuries and released.

DDC awarded $19,302 grant

The Region IX Developmental Disabilities Council, headquartered in Sikeston, has been awarded a $19,302 grant, Layton Pickard of Charleston, council president, has announced.

The grant is to be used to staff the Development Disabilities Program and supply salary for the coordinator.

The coordinator, Harold Tilley, will be responsible to a 15-man council. His main functions will be to coordinate the activities of all agencies in dealing with the developmentally disabled, to create public awareness and to act as an agent in helping to obtain services where developmentally disabled are concerned.

Counties involved in Region IX are Bollinger, Cape Girardeau, Madison, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Perry, Scott and Ste. Genevieve.

The coordinator's office may be reached by telephone at 471-8389.

MRMP grants low

COLUMBIA — Grants for the 1975-76 fiscal year through the Missouri Regional Medical Program have been announced. Four grants were awarded programs in Southeast Missouri.

Total funds provided the Regional Medical Program by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare were only $1,535,489 for the 1975-76 fiscal year -- substantially below the amount requested by the Regional Medical Program.

The Emergency Ambulance Technicians project of Sikeston, directed by William Sikes, Scott County Reorganized District No. 6, was allocated $1,541.50.

Other grants awarded in Southeast Missouri include, Bootheel Emergency Care System Implementation of Malden, $9,568.50; Emergency Ambulance Technician Project of Malden, $1,170; and Effective Utilization of Hospital Personnel program at Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau, $17,878.

As a result of the decrease in total funds, the Missouri Regional Medical program was able to fund projects only for a six-months period, unless additional funds are received.

In addition, HEW has restricted use of the funds to prohibit funding of any new projects. A new federal law mandates the setting up of one or more "health system agencies" in each state to replace regional Medical programs. At present, the only step completed in setting up health systems agencies in Missouri has been the designation of boundaries for the Health Service areas.

At its July 3 meeting, the executive committee of the Missouri Regional Medical Program approved six-month allocations.

Hearnes warns party

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A crowd of Missouri Democrats listened to an hour's worth of criticism of Republicans Saturday night, but then was brought back to reality by former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes when he said his party faces "a very difficult fight" next year.

Although he was not part of the formal program for the Democrats' fund-raising barbeque here, the candidate for the party's U.S. Senate nomination approached the microphone at the request of James Spain, state committee chairman.

"If you leave here thinking 1976 is a shoo-in, you're kidding yourselves," Hearnes told the silenced crowd. "We've got to fight, and we've got to fight hard."

Most of Missouri's statewide elected officials and three congressmen occupied the platform when Hearnes made his remarks. Two of them, Congressmen James Symington of St. Louis County and Jerry Litton of Chillicothe, are considered to be Hearnes' opponents in the race for the seat now occupied by Sen. Stuart Symington.

Hearnes was not given a seat on the platform, but sat in the rear of the audience throughout the program, which amounted to a series of criticism of Republicans in the state and national administrations.

In addition to Symington and Litton, speakers included former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, Treasurer James Spainhower, Rep. Richard Ichord, state Senate President Pro Tem William Cason and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt.

Rabbitt, 39, surprised no one when he announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. He said he will file for the nomination during the first week of August.

But it was Hearnes, a former tow-term governor, secretary of state and state representative, who gave the estimated 1,500 persons some food for thought.

"I was told I couldn't be on the platform since I was a candidate," Hearnes said. "Well, that's all I've heard is candidates making speeches."

Hearnes, who is under investigation by a federal grand jury in Kansas City, said the party must be careful to nominate a good presidential candidate next year, rather than making the mistake of 1972 when Sen. George S. McGovern headed the party's slate.

The former governor told Cason, who is a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, "You know the candidate is going to have to work like you know what to beat my successor," referring to incumbent Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth is expected to be the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate. Hearnes called Danforth "old spot," referring to the blond streak in Danforth's otherwise dark hair.

"He won't be easy. He's been sheltered by the press and has all the money he needs," Hearnes said.

Party officials said about 1,600 persons paid $5 each for the dinner of pork steak, cole slaw and over-peppered green beans.

The barbeque was designed to help reduce the state Democrats' debt, reported to be about $25,000 as of June 30.

Ross sentenced in assault case

CHARLESTON — Robert Ross, 24, of San Diego, Calif. and formerly of New Madrid, was sentenced in Circuit Court this morning to 10 years in custody of the State Department of corrections on a felonious assault charge by Special Judge Stanley Grimm of Cape Girardeau.

Ross, who entered a voluntary plea of guilty to today's charge, is presently serving consecutive sentences of 25 years for felonious assault and 30 years on an armed robbery charge assessed May 24, 1975. The additional 10 year sentence will also run consecutively.

In the change of venue case from New Madrid County, Ross pleaded guilty to the Dec. 4, 1973 assault with a gun on Willie Gilespie of Sikeston Route Four, a bus driver for the state school of retarded children in Sikeston.

Gilespie was making his bus run Dec. 4, 1973 and stopped at E. C. Beary Grocery and Service Station near Kewanee while an armed robbery was in progress.

Gilespie was made to lie on the floor of his bus by Ross, who came out of the store and boarded the bus. Gilespie was shot in the mouth.

Robert Ross, Calvin Ross of St. Louis and Charles Williams of New Madrid have previously been found guilty in jury trials in Mississippi County Circuit Court on armed robbery charges and another felonious assault charge which stemmed from the assault with a gun on Willie Hardin of rural New Madrid.

Harden, who was left in charge of Beary's store the day of the robbery, was severely beaten about the head and shot once above the right eyebrow, which resulted in the loss of sight in the right eye.

Calvin Ross has also been assessed 65 years for his part in the assaults and armed robbery. Williams, who served as a "lookout" or "wheel man" during the incident is serving a 14-year sentence assessed by a Mississippi County Circuit Court jury may 24, 1974.

ECONOMIC ILLITERATES

Two independent surveys — one by Opinion Research Corp. and the other by the Gallup Poll — provide conclusive evidence that our schools and colleges in America are turning out students whose ignorance in the field of economics is complete. Unfortunately, the record also indicates that many adults tend to learn no more about what makes the wheels of industry turn than they did in High School — which was nothing. When we consider that the riches of America come specifically from our fantastic system of free enterprise, which has been unique in all history, and which has enabled America to usrpass all other nations in material wealth, it is difficult to understand why many Americans should know so little about it.

An O.R.C. survey conducted in February and March of this year revealed that people guessed that the average manufacturer's profit, after taxes, is 33 per cent. They were wrong by six times more than the actual.

Their estimate of oil companies' after-tax profit was 61 per cent. That guess was eight times more than the actual.

When it came to automobile companies, people estimated the after-tax profit to be 39 per cent; more than 20 times greater than the actual.

Famed pollster Geoge Gallup found that "lack of knowledge and understanding of the free enterprise system is widespread. And it is really frightening."

Such ignorance is as unnecessary as it is unforgivable. During this summer, public schools all over the nation will be planning curriulums for the coming year. And every public school should have at least one hard-hitting, fundamental course in the American free enterprise system — sometimes called "capitalism" And no student should be allowed to graduate or be given a diploma without first having passed such a course of study. Maybe they would then have a little more pride in the great accomplishments of our country.

30 MILES TO THE CORD?

What happens when we run out of oil and natural gas or, as is likely to happen first, they become prohibitively expensive?

No need to panic, says one authority. We have a renewable resources that can replace them — at least to a degree — and one that was, in fact, the traditional source for synthetic goods until the advent of cheap oil and gas: Wood.

All the essential chemical building blocks to make such things as plastics and synthetic rubber can be derived from wood, noted Dr. Irving S.Goldstein of North Carolina State University's school of forest resources in a paper presented at the recent 169th annual meeting of the American Chemical society in Philadelphia.

"From a chemical point of view," he says,"the molecules don't remember where they came from."

The United States currently produces 18 million tons of synthetic materials a year, consuming between 3 and 5 per cent of all the petroleum used in the country. It would take roughly 50 million tons of wood to replace oil as the basis of the petrochemical industry, Goldstein estimates.

Not only is timber a renewable resource, the type of wood needed is low-grade timber, which exists in abundance. Much of it is now discarded in pulp factories.

Technically, wood could also be converted into fuel. The processing of wood alcohol is an ancient art. In research by the Bureau of Mines, wood was successfully converted into an oil that compared well with crude oil, both economically and chemically.

But while we have enough timber to meet the needs of the petrochemical industry, Goldstein doubts that there is enough to take the place of petroleum for fuel.

It might be a good idea to start planting trees, anyway.

Government intervention never works in the long run. A good case in point is in the energy area, where massive government intervention is expected as the Ways and Means Committee is about to clear its energy-tax bill. Prices will rise as tariffs may be increased $3 a barrel. Imposition of excise taxes (consumption) of up to 20 cents a gallon and excess-profits taxes for petroleum companies are bound to hurt you.

Our government knows only one solution -- energy conservation -- and the only way to achieve it is to legislate it. Many of us know otherwise. Free-market forces would conserve more energy than coercion. Decontrol of domestic energy prices and an end to government meddling would do more to work wonders for conservation. It would mobilize America's abundant energy resources: oil, gas, coal and atomic power. Energy controls hurt the poor, contrary to the misguided intents of Kennedy, Rockefeller and other paupers. Their ways to help the country is to spend government (?) money as if it were going out of style (which it is).

As Dr. Peter Beckman says in his Access to Energy Letter; "Print a few billion here and a f ew billion there; tax the producers and give it to the spongers. and whom is that policy hurting? Senator Abourezk? Congressperson Abzug? Or the guy who made $10,000 a year before he lost his job? We are under no illusions that Congress will choose the unpopular road of decontrol. But, when their popular road has ended in disaster, let it not be said that no other road was open."

CAMELOT NO LONGER

In the course of the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment hearings last year, Representative William L. Hungate became something of a minor national celebrity through his skillful mingling of folksy humor and incisive questioning. Yet for his constituents in Missouri's Ninth Congressional District, Mr. Hungate's performance should scarcely have been surprising, for since first elected to the House in 1964 he has shown himself to be a most uncommon representative. Mr. Hungate has announced that he will retire from politics at the end of his current term, and the House will be a bit poorer for his absence.

It is Mr. Hungate's gift not only to be keenly aware of the humanity involved in difficult decisions but also not to shrink from expressing it. That, we would say, is the mark of a realist. So in saying he will leave public life, Mr. Hungate declared that "I have gradually become aware that my enthusiasm for public service has been waning under the weight of my frustrated hopes, others' unreasonable pressures, and the job's persistent demands." Politics, in short, is no longer enjoyable for him and, responsibly, he is taking leave of it. "Politics has gone from the age of Camelot when all things were possible," he noted, "to the age of Watergate when all things are suspect."

Mr. Hungate has represented his district energetically, and, as evidenced by his against the Vietnam War and his skepticism over the Nixon pardon, he has been a conscientious deliberator in matters of broad national policy. Mr. Hungate frequently notes that he has had a special responsibility in filling the congressional seat of the late Clarence Cannon, who represented the Ninth District for 42 years. That responsibility, he may be assured, has been discharged well.

A fellow who thinks himself a wit is usually half right.

So many things happening these days are either unheard of or unspeakable, no wonder there's a communication gap!

IT'S EVEN WORSE!

There is an old theory that you can never have it so bad that someone else doesn't have it worse. Consider the matter of housing costs and mortgage payments–curses that plague every homeowner in the United States. It is even more expensive to buy a home in most other developed countries, and U.S. News & World Report tells the story. A five-room house, far from the center of Tokyo, may cost as much as $150,000. A prefabricated home 10 miles outside Zurich sells for $100,000. In a London suburb, a two-room shed"...that had never been lived in sold for $24,000."

Buying a home in America may sometimes seem to be a financial tragedy of colossal proportions. But, compared with putting a roof over your head in many other countries, it can only be classed as the most pleasant of fairy tales with the happiest of endings.

COULD MIDDLEMEN TIGHTEN BELTS?

David E. Bryant in Today's Farmer
Midcontinent Farmers Association

Prices received by farmers have dropped in eight of the last 12 months. They're now averaging about 15 per cent below a year ago. Meanwhile, retail food prices have continued to climb. They're now averaging about 9 per cent higher than a year ago. While that was happening, the cost of moving food from farm gate to checkout counter climbed 19 per cent. Why?

Costs of processing and distributing food have continued to rise, we're told. Prices paid for labor, equipment, fuel, transportation, etc., are higher now than a year ago. Farmers also are paying more now for labor, equipment, fuel, fertilizer, etc.

In the current situation, farmers again are tightening their belts-striving for even greater efficiency. Is it not reasonable to expect some of the same from middlemen-in the interest of lessening the inflation-recession problem?

Are food processors and distributors earnestly striving for increased productivity and efficiency? Are they trimming waste and expense at every possible point? Or is the middleman role now dominated by interests so big, so powerful and so oligopolistic that they can pass along all costs?

YOU CAN'T TAKE FISHES FOR WALKS

From National Geographic News Service

Man's best friend, at least in the United States, sports a tail and gills. Aquariums across the country glow with some 340,000,000 multi-colored, exotic fish. In contrast, the nation's dog and cat population has been estimated at a mere 72,000000. Enthusiasts claim that fish collecting and breeding ranks as the country's third largest hobby, after stamp collecting and amateur photography.

Fish normally show little interest in people—except at feeding time—so why such popularity?

"One reason is that they offer something for everyone," says an avid aquarium buff. "Children learn about marine biology, mothers delight in the brilliant colors, and fathers grumpy after a hard day at the office can soothe their psyches by watching the antics of a school of black popeyes and lionheads." Moreover, fish don't scratch children, chase cars, pollute parks or leave hairs on the sofa. They are easy to keep, inexpensive to feed and resistant to most diseases. Hardy specimens live 40 years or more.

Although the choice of tropicals constantly widens, the aquarium favorite still is the goldfish. First cultivated by the Chinese more than 1000 years ago, it was simply a drab relative of the carp. Through the years, however, selective breeding has turned the goldfish into an underwater extravaganza.

Colors range from blazing reds and golds to mottled calicoes that combine every shade of the rainbow. Shapes include flowing fins, extra fins, missing fins, bulging eyes, raspberry-like heads, and nearly round bodies. One extrememly rare ornamental, the Azumanishiki or Lion-headed Veiltail, is such a clumsy swimmer that it has to be fed by hand or it will starve to death.

True gold fish enthusiasts believe their pets have distinct personalities as well as good looks. Some say their underwater pets even respond when called. As fishes go, their hearing isn't particularly good. The goldfish has a range that picks up to 3480 vibrations a second, while some other fishes detect at least 7000. A goldfish might hear the thunder of an approaching storm, but not the high notes of opera singer Beverly Sills.

GREAT SECURITY FRAUD

Food stamps are now big business for the federal government--and for federal taxpayers. What started as an $860,000 federal welfare program 12 years ago has now reached a $2.5 billion level with stamps going to over 12 million Americans--up from 50,000 people in 1961 when President Kennedy launched the plan as an experiment.

Under the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, the food stamp plan is to be greatly enlarged. Every county in the United States must participate in the plan. It is said that the President and Congress are determined to end hunger in America which is, indeed, a laudable objective--an objective heavily frosted over with the irony of government-bred inflation. The latter is likely to increase the rolls of the poverty stricken faster than the bureaucracy can print and dole out food stamps. The danger in the food stamp program, as in every other federal welfare scheme, is that government officials tend to raise public expectations beyond any hope of fulfillment. Until government spending is brought under control, every new welfare plan adds to the fraud and delusion and increases our subservience to rules and red tape.

NEW RULES ON CLOSING COSTS

Whether you are buying or selling a home, you need to know about the new federal rules on settlement costs going into effect June 20. The major change is that both buyer and seller must be told in advance about all settlement charges on just about every mortgage loan made in the U.S. also, certain practices that might boost the fees are banned.

Here are highlights of the regulations, which stem from a law passed by Congress last year:

A bank, savings and loan or other lender must give the buyer and seller a form listing in detail all settlement fees at the time the buyer commits himself to take out a mortgage or at least 12 days before the settlement date. The buyer can waive this 12-day deadline, in which case the information must be provided at least three days before settlement.

The idea is that the buyer can use the information to shop around for lower fees among lenders, title companies and others who provide settlement services. Also, the buyer will know exactly how much cash he will need at settlement. And since there are no hard and fast rules on who pays what charges, the buyer and seller may be able to negotiate on which will pay specific fees or to negotiate with the providers of the services on the amount of the fees.

Kickbacks are banned. For example, a lawyer is prohibited from paying a fee to a real estate agent for referring the home buyer to him.

The seller of the property is forbidden to require the buyer to purchase title insurance from any particular title company.

The amount a lender can require the borrower to deposit in escrow accounts is limited to the buyer's share of taxes and insurance that have accumulated before settlement, plus one twelfth of the estimated amount due on those two items in the first year after settlement.

For houses at least a year old, the lender must give the buyer the name and address of the seller and the date he bought the property. If the seller has owned the property less than two years and has not used it as a resjdence, the lender must give the buyer the date and purchase price of the last "arm's length transfer" of the house, plus a list of improvements made and their cost. The buyer then can better judge the present value.

Lenders must give home-loan applicants the booklet "Settlement Costs," which was prepared by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The booklet explains various settlement costs, such as loan-origination fee and title charges, and spells out the new regulations.

"I can answer the doctor's question," replied young Eliot. "Harvard has a new president!"

100 Per Cent Wage Increase: Anti-Government Strikes Stalk Many Nations

WASHINGTON — Hoary specters stalk the free world – the general strike and direct threats of massive crippling stoppages by the workers who run the inner machinery of nations, states and cities.

For the strikers who paralyze a nation, topple a government, force whole cabinets to resign, cripple a vast province or state, open a city to garbage strikes and police job action, pestilence and violence, this is strong political drink.

Almost everywhere, prime ministers and presidents, governors and mayors are going political hat in hand to labor chiefs, sometimes pleading, sometimes buying industrial peace by mortgaging the future in a policy of bankruptcy bargaining.

In this tense moment the issue isn't the validity or the greed of union demands. It's the inherent strength of united labor action – the ability of any group of men and women, be they democratic workers of hand and brain (as the old socialists used to say) or tough armed undercover militias such as serve the Italian and Portuguese Communist labor syndicates, to shut off government machinery.

In Argentina, for example, the three-million- member General Confederation of Labor (CGT), whose tough leaders I once knew well, polled a general strike the other day -- the first such nationwide stoppage since Britain's 1926 walkout. And just look at what has happened to the United Kingdom since.

In the Argentine, Buenos Aires and other big cities no different in many neighborhoods than New York, Cincinnati or Los Angeles, went silent. No factory wheels whirred. No mass transit. No gas filling stations open. No nothing. The CGT wanted an 80 per cent to 130 per cent wage increase. The government offered to permit first a 50 per cent then another 30 per cent raise. And this is a virtually bankrupt government. but the CGT struck -- and President Isabel Peron's cabinet turned in its collective resignation. Madame President agreed to a 100 per cent wage increase. The strike was called off.

And north across the Atlantic, Britain's socialist Labor prime minister Wilson went to the socialist- Communist controlled National Union of Mineworkers policy committee conference. He pleaded with them not to adopt a demand for a 66 to 90 per cent wage increase. This would be "crazy," even "suicidal," he warned. And he went hat in hand though he is of their own laborite flesh and blood. He could not forget that these miners had toppled ex-prime minister Ed Heath's conservative government by striking and forcing Britain onto a three-day work week for lack of coal, which feeds 70 per cent of the isle's electric power plants.

The miners' delegates eased the stern wordage of their resolutions. But, it seems to me, only because actual negotiations for the next contract with the nationalized coal board is months off. The NUM leaders won't hesitate to topple their own government, if need be, to get heavy wage increases the near bankrupt English can't afford to give.

Soon Paris will flare. And Rome, where the coalition of three Communist and socialist unions went possum only because they wanted to be the white hat guys in the recent election campaign. but there's no doubt the Communist General Confederation of Italian Labor (CGIL) can cripple allof Italy should its political front not win much of what it wants from the Christian Democratic parliament.

Nor is our own nation immune. The political thrust differs from that of Buenos Aires, London, Paris or Rome. But the inherent power to shut down public services, even federal government operations, is evident.

In the cities there will be counterpressure to the firing of police (at least 3,000 in New York at the latest count), firefighters and other civil service people. They believe they're "civilians," as the cops say. They strike as though they were in the priate sector. It's also happening in New York City and points in between. It must be recalled that in 1968 New York labor threatened a general strike to support the sanitationmen's nine-day walkout. So the difference between Buenos Aires and New York is macro and mini-action.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Marcos Ups Bribe

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — We recently reported, with detailed documentation, that Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos had tried to bribe a former aide with $50,000 not to testify before the U.S. Congress.

Marcos has now offered the witness, Primitivo Mijares, a full $100,000 if he will recant his testimony, repudiate our story and retire to Australia.

As Marcos' former press censor, Mijares had a ringside seat to the rise of the Marcos dictatorship. He has testified at House hearings about the tyranny and corruption he had seen.

In Manila, meanwhile, Marcos has denied he tried to block Mijares' testimony. We happen to have copies, however, of the bank transactions involved in the original $50,000 bribe.

On the day Mijares testified, a Philippine National Bank check, No. 4905, was made out for $50,000 to Marcos' man in San Francisco, Ambassador Trinidad Alconcel. The check was endorsed by Alconcel and deposited in a joint bank account in the names of Mijares and Alconcel.

After Mijares went ahead with his testimony, Alconcel abruptly transferred the $50,000 the next day to his own personal bank account.

Since it is a criminal offense to interfere with a federal witness, we have turned our information over to the FBI. Rep. Don Fraser, D-Minn., who presided over the House hearings, has also urged the Justice Department to conduct a full inquiry.

Unaware that Mijares was cooperating with the FBI, Alconcel got in touch with him again and doubled the offer. Alconcel made it quite clear he was speaking for Marcos.

To establish the connection, Mijares, an ex-newspaperman, called Marcos' office and spoke with his top aide-de-camp, Dr. Gullermo de Vega. The aide, according to Mijares, verified the $100,000 offer.

To establish our own verification, we retained crack San Francisco lawyer Sheldon Greene to listen, with Mijares' permission, to a second phone conversation with Manila. The aide, de Vega, reaffirmed in English and Tagalog his offer to "help" Mijares and didn't question Mijares' references to the $100,000 bribe.

Mijares asked, as bait, whether Marcos would go as high as $250,000. This would have to be approved, said de Vega, by Marcos personally.

Acquaintances of Alconcel in San Francisco tell us Marcos is trying to persuade him to take the rap for the bribe, leave the United States and accept a minor ambassadorship. We haven't been able to reach Alconcel for comment.

FORD FAVORED: Las Vegas oddsmaker Jimmy the Greek Snyder, who calculates the political odds exclusively for us, gives Ronald Reagan only one chance in 20 of taking the Republican presidential nomination away from President Ford.

But the former California governor has one chance in four of stealing the vice presidential nomination from Nelson Rockefeller.

As the Greek assesses the situation, Alabama's Governor George Wallace might break with the Democrats and run again as a third-party candidate for the White House. He would be likely to draw conservative voters away from President Ford, just as he hurt Richard Nixon more than Hubert Humphrey in the 1968 presidential election.

Under these circumstances, the Greek foresees a definite possibility that the GOP convention, in a move to give the ticket a stronger conservative coloration, might nominate Reagan to be Ford's running mate.

Ford is also a clear favorite over all the leading Democratic contenders. The President has the common touch. His favorite line is that he is "a Ford, not a Lincoln." He talks about his fondness for the late Harry Truman, another President in the image of the common man. Ford also has an easy, affable Eisenhower quality that the people instinctively like.

For these reasons, according to the Greek, Ford will be hard to beat in 1976.

SUSPICIOUS SHEEP: Some environmental wolves in sheep's clothing have suddenly shown up in Washington. In the name of the environment, they are bleating against measures that would interfere with profits and jobs.

While true environmentalists are lucky to get the ear of the White House gardener, these heavily funded, labor-industry lobbyists have been promised a conference with President Ford's top ecology advisors.

The lobbyists have formed several groups. A typical one calls itself the Environmental Balance Association and claims to take a balanced view of the environmental issue.

But Ralph Nader told us that the talk of "balance" is really "a semantic figleaf to camouflage a deliberate rape of our environment."

Our own investigation largely supports Nader's charge. Despite their professed concern for the environment, these lobbyists get their backing from banks, construction firms, agribusiness and companies with major pollution records, plus some unions.

ECONOMIC ILLITERATES

Two independent surveys — one by Opinion Research Corp. and the other by the Gallup Poll — provide conclusive evidence that our schools and colleges in America are turning out students whose ignorance in the field of economics is complete. Unfortunately, the record also indicates that many adults tend to learn no more about what makes the wheels of industry turn than they did in High School — which was nothing. When we consider that the riches of America come specifically from our fantastic system of free enterprise, which has been unique in all history, and which has enabled America to usrpass all other nations in material wealth, it is difficult to understand why many Americans should know so little about it.

An O.R.C. survey conducted in February and March of this year revealed that people guessed that the average manufacturer's profit, after taxes, is 33 per cent. They were wrong by six times more than the actual.

Their estimate of oil companies' after-tax profit was 61 per cent. That guess was eight times more than the actual.

When it came to automobile companies, people estimated the after-tax profit to be 39 per cent; more than 20 times greater than the actual.

Famed pollster Geoge Gallup found that "lack of knowledge and understanding of the free enterprise system is widespread. And it is really frightening."

Such ignorance is as unnecessary as it is unforgivable. During this summer, public schools all over the nation will be planning curriulums for the coming year. And every public school should have at least one hard-hitting, fundamental course in the American free enterprise system — sometimes called "capitalism" And no student should be allowed to graduate or be given a diploma without first having passed such a course of study. Maybe they would then have a little more pride in the great accomplishments of our country.

30 MILES TO THE CORD?

What happens when we run out of oil and natural gas or, as is likely to happen first, they become prohibitively expensive?

No need to panic, says one authority. We have a renewable resources that can replace them — at least to a degree — and one that was, in fact, the traditional source for synthetic goods until the advent of cheap oil and gas: Wood.

All the essential chemical building blocks to make such things as plastics and synthetic rubber can be derived from wood, noted Dr. Irving S.Goldstein of North Carolina State University's school of forest resources in a paper presented at the recent 169th annual meeting of the American Chemical society in Philadelphia.

"From a chemical point of view," he says,"the molecules don't remember where they came from."

The United States currently produces 18 million tons of synthetic materials a year, consuming between 3 and 5 per cent of all the petroleum used in the country. It would take roughly 50 million tons of wood to replace oil as the basis of the petrochemical industry, Goldstein estimates.

Not only is timber a renewable resource, the type of wood needed is low-grade timber, which exists in abundance. Much of it is now discarded in pulp factories.

Technically, wood could also be converted into fuel. The processing of wood alcohol is an ancient art. In research by the Bureau of Mines, wood was successfully converted into an oil that compared well with crude oil, both economically and chemically.

But while we have enough timber to meet the needs of the petrochemical industry, Goldstein doubts that there is enough to take the place of petroleum for fuel.

It might be a good idea to start planting trees, anyway.

Government intervention never works in the long run. A good case in point is in the energy area, where massive government intervention is expected as the Ways and Means Committee is about to clear its energy-tax bill. Prices will rise as tariffs may be increased $3 a barrel. Imposition of excise taxes (consumption) of up to 20 cents a gallon and excess-profits taxes for petroleum companies are bound to hurt you.

Our government knows only one solution -- energy conservation -- and the only way to achieve it is to legislate it. Many of us know otherwise. Free-market forces would conserve more energy than coercion. Decontrol of domestic energy prices and an end to government meddling would do more to work wonders for conservation. It would mobilize America's abundant energy resources: oil, gas, coal and atomic power. Energy controls hurt the poor, contrary to the misguided intents of Kennedy, Rockefeller and other paupers. Their ways to help the country is to spend government (?) money as if it were going out of style (which it is).

As Dr. Peter Beckman says in his Access to Energy Letter; "Print a few billion here and a f ew billion there; tax the producers and give it to the spongers. and whom is that policy hurting? Senator Abourezk? Congressperson Abzug? Or the guy who made $10,000 a year before he lost his job? We are under no illusions that Congress will choose the unpopular road of decontrol. But, when their popular road has ended in disaster, let it not be said that no other road was open."

CAMELOT NO LONGER

In the course of the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment hearings last year, Representative William L. Hungate became something of a minor national celebrity through his skillful mingling of folksy humor and incisive questioning. Yet for his constituents in Missouri's Ninth Congressional District, Mr. Hungate's performance should scarcely have been surprising, for since first elected to the House in 1964 he has shown himself to be a most uncommon representative. Mr. Hungate has announced that he will retire from politics at the end of his current term, and the House will be a bit poorer for his absence.

It is Mr. Hungate's gift not only to be keenly aware of the humanity involved in difficult decisions but also not to shrink from expressing it. That, we would say, is the mark of a realist. So in saying he will leave public life, Mr. Hungate declared that "I have gradually become aware that my enthusiasm for public service has been waning under the weight of my frustrated hopes, others' unreasonable pressures, and the job's persistent demands." Politics, in short, is no longer enjoyable for him and, responsibly, he is taking leave of it. "Politics has gone from the age of Camelot when all things were possible," he noted, "to the age of Watergate when all things are suspect."

Mr. Hungate has represented his district energetically, and, as evidenced by his against the Vietnam War and his skepticism over the Nixon pardon, he has been a conscientious deliberator in matters of broad national policy. Mr. Hungate frequently notes that he has had a special responsibility in filling the congressional seat of the late Clarence Cannon, who represented the Ninth District for 42 years. That responsibility, he may be assured, has been discharged well.

A fellow who thinks himself a wit is usually half right.

So many things happening these days are either unheard of or unspeakable, no wonder there's a communication gap!

IT'S EVEN WORSE!

There is an old theory that you can never have it so bad that someone else doesn't have it worse. Consider the matter of housing costs and mortgage payments--curses that plague every homeowner in the United States. It is even more expensive to buy a home in most other developed countries, and U.S. News & World Report tells the story. A five-room house, far from the center of Tokyo, may cost as much as $150,000. A prefabricated home 10 miles outside Zurich sells for $100,000. In a London suburb, a two-room shed"...that had never been lived in sold for $24,000."

Buying a home in America may sometimes seem to be a financial tragedy of colossal proportions. But, compared with putting a roof over your head in many other countries, it can only be classed as the most pleasant of fairy tales with the happiest of endings.

COULD MIDDLEMEN TIGHTEN BELTS?

David E. Bryant in Today's Farmer
Midcontinent Farmers Association

Prices received by farmers have dropped in eight of the last 12 months. They're now averaging about 15 per cent below a year ago. Meanwhile, retail food prices have continued to climb. They're now averaging about 9 per cent higher than a year ago. While that was happening, the cost of moving food from farm gate to checkout counter climbed 19 per cent. Why?

Costs of processing and distributing food have continued to rise, we're told. Prices paid for labor, equipment, fuel, transportation, etc., are higher now than a year ago. Farmers also are paying more now for labor, equipment, fuel, fertilizer, etc.

In the current situation, farmers again are tightening their belts-striving for even greater efficiency. Is it not reasonable to expect some of the same from middlemen-in the interest of lessening the inflation-recession problem?

Are food processors and distributors earnestly striving for increased productivity and efficiency? Are they trimming waste and expense at every possible point? Or is the middleman role now dominated by interests so big, so powerful and so oligopolistic that they can pass along all costs?

YOU CAN'T TAKE FISHES FOR WALKS

From National Geographic News Service

Man's best friend, at least in the United States, sports a tail and gills. Aquariums across the country glow with some 340,000,000 multi-colored, exotic fish. In contrast, the nation's dog and cat population has been estimated at a mere 72,000000. Enthusiasts claim that fish collecting and breeding ranks as the country's third largest hobby, after stamp collecting and amateur photography.

Fish normally show little interest in people—except at feeding time—so why such popularity?

"One reason is that they offer something for everyone," says an avid aquarium buff. "Children learn about marine biology, mothers delight in the brilliant colors, and fathers grumpy after a hard day at the office can soothe their psyches by watching the antics of a school of black popeyes and lionheads." Moreover, fish don't scratch children, chase cars, pollute parks or leave hairs on the sofa. They are easy to keep, inexpensive to feed and resistant to most diseases. Hardy specimens live 40 years or more.

Although the choice of tropicals constantly widens, the aquarium favorite still is the goldfish. First cultivated by the Chinese more than 1000 years ago, it was simply a drab relative of the carp. Through the years, however, selective breeding has turned the goldfish into an underwater extravaganza.

Colors range from blazing reds and golds to mottled calicoes that combine every shade of the rainbow. Shapes include flowing fins, extra fins, missing fins, bulging eyes, raspberry-like heads, and nearly round bodies. One extrememly rare ornamental, the Azumanishiki or Lion-headed Veiltail, is such a clumsy swimmer that it has to be fed by hand or it will starve to death.

True gold fish enthusiasts believe their pets have distinct personalities as well as good looks. Some say their underwater pets even respond when called. As fishes go, their hearing isn't particularly good. The goldfish has a range that picks up to 3480 vibrations a second, while some other fishes detect at least 7000. A goldfish might hear the thunder of an approaching storm, but not the high notes of opera singer Beverly Sills.

GREAT SECURITY FRAUD

Food stamps are now big business for the federal government--and for federal taxpayers. What started as an $860,000 federal welfare program 12 years ago has now reached a $2.5 billion level with stamps going to over 12 million Americans--up from 50,000 people in 1961 when President Kennedy launched the plan as an experiment.

Under the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, the food stamp plan is to be greatly enlarged. Every county in the United States must participate in the plan. It is said that the President and Congress are determined to end hunger in America which is, indeed, a laudable objective--an objective heavily frosted over with the irony of government-bred inflation. The latter is likely to increase the rolls of the poverty stricken faster than the bureaucracy can print and dole out food stamps. The danger in the food stamp program, as in every other federal welfare scheme, is that government officials tend to raise public expectations beyond any hope of fulfillment. Until government spending is brought under control, every new welfare plan adds to the fraud and delusion and increases our subservience to rules and red tape.

NEW RULES ON CLOSING COSTS

Whether you are buying or selling a home, you need to know about the new federal rules on settlement costs going into effect June 20. The major change is that both buyer and seller must be told in advance about all settlement charges on just about every mortgage loan made in the U.S. also, certain practices that might boost the fees are banned.

Here are highlights of the regulations, which stem from a law passed by Congress last year:

A bank, savings and loan or other lender must give the buyer and seller a form listing in detail all settlement fees at the time the buyer commits himself to take out a mortgage or at least 12 days before the settlement date. The buyer can waive this 12-day deadline, in which case the information must be provided at least three days before settlement.

The idea is that the buyer can use the information to shop around for lower fees among lenders, title companies and others who provide settlement services. Also, the buyer will know exactly how much cash he will need at settlement. And since there are no hard and fast rules on who pays what charges, the buyer and seller may be able to negotiate on which will pay specific fees or to negotiate with the providers of the services on the amount of the fees.

Kickbacks are banned. For example, a lawyer is prohibited from paying a fee to a real estate agent for referring the home buyer to him.

The seller of the property is forbidden to require the buyer to purchase title insurance from any particular title company.

The amount a lender can require the borrower to deposit in escrow accounts is limited to the buyer's share of taxes and insurance that have accumulated before settlement, plus one twelfth of the estimated amount due on those two items in the first year after settlement.

For houses at least a year old, the lender must give the buyer the name and address of the seller and the date he bought the property. If the seller has owned the property less than two years and has not used it as a residence, the lender must give the buyer the date and purchase price of the last "arm's length transfer" of the house, plus a list of improvements made and their cost. The buyer then can better judge the present value.

Lenders must give home-loan applicants the booklet "Settlement Costs," which was prepared by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The booklet explains various settlement costs, such as loan-origination fee and title charges, and spells out the new regulations.

100 Per Cent Wage Increase: Anti-Government Strikes Stalk Many Nations

WASHINGTON — Hoary specters stalk the free world – the general strike and direct threats of massive crippling stoppages by the workers who run the inner machinery of nations, states and cities.

For the strikers who paralyze a nation, topple a government, force whole cabinets to resign, cripple a vast province or state, open a city to garbage strikes and police job action, pestilence and violence, this is strong political drink.

Almost everywhere, prime ministers and presidents, governors and mayors are going political hat in hand to labor chiefs, sometimes pleading, sometimes buying industrial peace by mortgaging the future in a policy of bankruptcy bargaining.

In this tense moment the issue isn't the validity or the greed of union demands. It's the inherent strength of united labor action – the ability of any group of men and women, be they democratic workers of hand and brain (as the old socialists used to say) or tough armed undercover militias such as serve the Italian and Portuguese Communist labor syndicates, to shut off government machinery.

In Argentina, for example, the three-million- member General Confederation of Labor (CGT), whose tough leaders I once knew well, polled a general strike the other day -- the first such nationwide stoppage since Britain's 1926 walkout. And just look at what has happened to the United Kingdom since.

In the Argentine, Buenos Aires and other big cities no different in many neighborhoods than New York, Cincinnati or Los Angeles, went silent. No factory wheels whirred. No mass transit. No gas filling stations open. No nothing. The CGT wanted an 80 per cent to 130 per cent wage increase. The government offered to permit first a 50 per cent then another 30 per cent raise. And this is a virtually bankrupt government. but the CGT struck -- and President Isabel Peron's cabinet turned in its collective resignation. Madame President agreed to a 100 per cent wage increase. The strike was called off.

And north across the Atlantic, Britain's socialist Labor prime minister Wilson went to the socialist- Communist controlled National Union of Mineworkers policy committee conference. He pleaded with them not to adopt a demand for a 66 to 90 per cent wage increase. This would be "crazy," even "suicidal," he warned. And he went hat in hand though he is of their own laborite flesh and blood. He could not forget that these miners had toppled ex-prime minister Ed Heath's conservative government by striking and forcing Britain onto a three-day work week for lack of coal, which feeds 70 per cent of the isle's electric power plants.

The miners' delegates eased the stern wordage of their resolutions. But, it seems to me, only because actual negotiations for the next contract with the nationalized coal board is months off. The NUM leaders won't hesitate to topple their own government, if need be, to get heavy wage increases the near bankrupt English can't afford to give.

Soon Paris will flare. And Rome, where the coalition of three Communist and socialist unions went possum only because they wanted to be the white hat guys in the recent election campaign. but there's no doubt the Communist General Confederation of Italian Labor (CGIL) can cripple allof Italy should its political front not win much of what it wants from the Christian Democratic parliament.

Nor is our own nation immune. The political thrust differs from that of Buenos Aires, London, Paris or Rome. But the inherent power to shut down public services, even federal government operations, is evident.

In the cities there will be counterpressure to the firing of police (at least 3,000 in New York at the latest count), firefighters and other civil service people. They believe they're "civilians," as the cops say. They strike as though they were in the priate sector. And the chairman of the recent mayor's conference in Boston, San Francisco's mayor Joe Alioto, says fire the cops and firefighters and hospital attendants and correction officers if they strike. and let them stay fired.

Look who's talking. He who practically gave his city away to some mighty tough unions, not all of them in the AFL-CIO. He who signed a contract with the street cleanerss which gives them $17,000 annually. He who spread the fever called "if the garbage men can get it we want more."

It's also happening in New York City and points in between. It must be recalled that in 1968 New York labor threatened a general strike to support the sanitationmen's nine-day walkout. So the difference between Buenos Aires and New York is macro and mini-action.

This would make pensions higher.

U.S. and Russia share space glory

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Russia will likely dominate manned space travel for the next four years while America goes through a spacecraft model change. But by the 1980s, the United States should be the world's common carrier in space.

The Apollo-Soyuz Test Project (ASTP), the joint U.S.-Soviet mission set for launch July 15, is expected to be the last voyage of the Apollo spacecraft, the reliable vehicle that ferried men to the moon and back, and America's last manned space flight until at least 1979.

Russia, however, is expected to continue manned flights at the rate of several a year using the Soyuz, a simple earth orbital spacecraft, much smaller and less sophisticated than the Apollo. The Soyuz is the Soviet space workhorse, used to fly two-man crews to Salyut space stations.

American space officials say the Russians are building a massive space complex — three or four times larger than Cape Canaveral, Fla. — in a southern Soviet desert.

Astronaut Thomas P. Stafford, Apollo commander for the ASTP mission and one of the few foreigners to visit the Russian Baykonur Cosmodrome, said the Soviet space complex "makes Cape Canaveral look pretty small."

He said the complex still under construction includes a new city of 50,000 called Leninsk to support the space missions.

"They are not slowing down one bit in their space program," he said. "They told us they're going to continue to have several manned flights a year."

The American space agency is concentrating its effort and funds on development of the Space Shuttle, a reusable spacecraft.

Dr. Christopher C. Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Center near Houston, said the Shuttle may turn America into a space transportation agency for the whole world.

Experts believe that once the shuttle is operational, American companies and foreign governments will pay freight charges to deliver payloads into earth orbit. In effect, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) would become the common carrier in space, just as trucks, railroads and ships are common carriers on earth.

Key to this new era in space is cost.

Currently, the cost of delivering one pound into space is several thousand dollars, largely because spacecraft are used only once and then discarded. This would be similar to junking an airliner after every flight.

Advance, Bernie banks get funds

Two Stoddard County banks will receive a total of $215,000 in deposits from the State of Missouri in the third statewide allocation of general funds under the Missouri model for the investment of inactive state funds, it was announced by James I. Spainhower, state treasurer.

The banks in Stoddard County include, Bank of Advance, $115,000; and State Bank of Bernie, $100,000.

The banks will pay to the state the current market rate of interest which is 6.4 per cent Spainhower said.

The distribution is based on a formula which returns an amount to each county proportional to the amount paid by that county in state sales and income tax. According to Spainhower, this formula standardizes the requirements which must be met by banks before they can be selected for the deposit of these general funds.

When the amount designated for a county has been determined, the applications from the banks within that county are checked against the requirements of the formula and the amount available for deposit with each bank is established. Spainhower said, "Any bank in the state which reflects a community involvement by maintaining a loan deposit ratio of at least fifty percent will receive its share of the money, providing it chooses to accept the deposit at the maximum rate of interest allowed by law."

The $50 million for this allocation reflects Spainhower's policy of keeping the state's money within Missouri whenever possible. "This is being done," Spainhower explained, "to make more money available for the state's local economies in the hope that the funds will generate local growth and financial stability."

Cher bares personality

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two sides of television superstar Cher were revealed this week in separate but equally revealing instances.

Statements she made about the divorce action she filed against her husband of nine days revealed a flighty, indecisive nature. But Cher emerged as a level-headed, strong-willed woman in grand jury testimony surrounding the drug overdose death of a rock musician.

The 29-year-old singer-comedienne was credited with saving the life of another rock musician who attended a party last September at which Average White Band performer Robbie McIntosh, 28, died of a drug overdose.

Kenneth Moss, 31, host of the party and a former Wall Street "whiz kid," pleaded innocent at his arraignment Thursday on a charge of murdering McIntosh.

In grand jury testimony, Cher said she saw McIntosh inhale two "hits" — or doses — of a white powder given to him by Moss. She said that when she arrived at the party, Moss offered her some white powder in a piece of tin foil. She said she believed the powder was cocaine and that she refused it.

Later, McIntosh became ill and Cher said she urged Moss to call a doctor, but Moss refused, saying it was "no big deal." Another Average White Band musician, Alan Gorrie, also became ill, and police said Cher took him to her home and provided treatment that saved his life.

Cher and her former husband and singing partner Sonny Bono, 40, were long known to be antidrug within the rock music environment where drugs often flow freely.

Cher cited "irreconcilable differences" in filing for divorce from Gregg Allman, rock music composer and performer, whom she married three days after her divorce from Bono was finalized.

For nearly 11 years, Cher's personal and financial activities were supervised by Bono. Court action on custody of their daughter, Chastity, 6, and division of community property is still pending.

"I am trying to make my own decisions now after years of having had them made for me," Cher said Wednesday after moving to dissolve her marriage to Allman. "I am bound to make wrong ones from time to time, and this was one of those times."

Allman, 27, had said the divorce action was a misunderstanding and that it would not be completed. But Cher said Thursday, "I have not changed my mind. I am proceeding with the divorce."

Currently reported to be in seclusion in Southern California, Cher has postponed for two weeks the taping of the first episode of her hit CBS-TV variety show for fall.

Cher bares personality

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two sides of television superstar Cher were revealed this week in separate but equally revealing instances.

Statements she made about the divorce action she filed against her husband of nine days revealed a flighty, indecisive nature. But Cher emerged as a level-headed, strong-willed woman in grand jury testimony surrounding the drug overdose death of a rock musician.

The 29-year-old singer-comedienne was credited with saving the life of another rock musician who attended a party last September at which Average White Band performer Robbie McIntosh, 28, died of a drug overdose.

Kenneth Moss, 31, host of the party and a former Wall Street "whiz kid," pleaded innocent at his arraignment Thursday on a charge of murdering McIntosh.

In grand jury testimony, Cher said she saw McIntosh inhale two "hits" — or doses — of a white powder given to him by Moss. She said that when she arrived at the party, Moss offered her some white powder in a piece of tin foil. She said she believed the powder was cocaine and that she refused it.

Later, McIntosh became ill and Cher said she urged Moss to call a doctor, but Moss refused, saying it was "no big deal." Another Average White Band musician, Alan Gorrie, also became ill, and police said Cher took him to her home and provided treatment that saved his life.

Cher and her former husband and singing partner Sonny Bono, 40, were long known to be antidrug within the rock music environment where drugs often flow freely.

Cher cited "irreconcilable differences" in filing for divorce from Gregg Allman, rock music composer and performer, whom she married three days after her divorce from Bono was finalized.

For nearly 11 years, Cher's personal and financial activities were supervised by Bono. Court action on custody of their daughter, Chastity, 6, and division of community property is still pending.

"I am trying to make my own decisions now after years of having had them made for me," Cher said Wednesday after moving to dissolve her marriage to Allman. "I am bound to make wrong ones from time to time, and this was one of those times."

Allman, 27, had said the divorce action was a misunderstanding and that it would not be completed. But Cher said Thursday, "I have not changed my mind. I am proceeding with the divorce."

Currently reported to be in seclusion in Southern California, Cher has postponed for two weeks the taping of the first episode of her hit CBS-TV variety show for fall.

"more spice than everything nice"

Consumer booklet lists food cholersterol content

There's been a lot of concern about the role of fats in our diet--how much, what kinds and how they affect our bodies. Scientific opinion varies about the role fats, among other foods, play in the risk of coronary heart disease.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has a publication which discusses this subject in detail. A copy of "Fats in Food and Diet" may be obtained by sending 30 cents to Consumer Information, Dept. 14, Pueblo, Col. 81009.

The booklet discusses what fats are and explains the difference between saturated and polyunsaturated fats. And, especially helpful to those whose doctors have advised a diet restricting saturated fats and cholesterol are two charts. One lists cholesterol content of selected foods, the other lists fat content and major fatty acid composition of selected foods.

Household hints

When warming tea rolls, doughnuts, etc., use your electric skillet insteadof your oven. Place a piece of foil in the bottom of the skillet, put the rolls on it, cover and set at low for 15 to 20 minutes. Saves energy.

Ann Landers

Living together is not entire bliss

Dear Ann Landers: I hope all those people who think living together is as good as or better than getting married will read this letter--and think again. I am in such a trap and I don't know what to do.

G. and I decided we were in love. He didn't want to get married again after two divorces (one was a real mess), and it was O.K. with me. That was seven years ago.

Our five-year-old son starts school in the fall. His name is the same as mine. I will have to go to school with him and write on the registration blank, son of Miss A.L. and G.O. How will it look?

Whenever I mention marriage, G. says, "I couldn't think more of you if you were my legal wife. Let's not spoil our beautiful relationship by getting married. I did that twice."

He really treats me royally, Ann, and he's crazy about the boy. Tell me what to do.–No-Ring Woman

Dear Woman: Give G. ten days to make up his mind. Either you get a ring on your finger and that piece of paper in your hand, or it's goodbye. And make it stick.

If he loves you and the boy as much as you say, he'll marry you. If not, it's better that you know it now.

Dear Ann Landers: My brother telephoned me last night, quite upset. He said he had just received a note from the principal of his son's school saying Jerry, who is six years old and in the first grade, is known for picking on the other kids and makes a general nuisance of himself. The principal warned him that if Jerry hasn't settled down by the time school starts in the fall, he will be expelled.

Is it possible to expel a first grader? How can I Jerry be helped?–Concerned Uncle

Dear Uncle: A child whose anti-social behavior disrupts the classroom can be expelled no matter what the age.

Obviously your nephew needs counseling and so do his parents. Children who cannot get along with others and misbehave constantly are troubled. They seek attention outside the home because there are so few rewards IN the home.

It would be helpful if you could establish a close relationship with Jerry so when he feels the need for help he can holler "uncle."

Dear Ann Landers: I am very fond of a young man who needs psychiatric help. He has moods that are frightening. Sometimes he becomes so depressed I'm afraid he might take his life. Other times he is euphoric beyond description.

His temper is unpredictable. I never know before we meet whether he is going to be cheerful and affectionate, or glum and rejecting.

I've begged him to seek professional help (he can well afford the best) but he refuses. What can I do?--Plenty Worried

Dear P.L.': Nothing. Unless a person recognizes the need and wants to avail himself of it, it's utterly hopeless. This goes for alcoholics, overeaters, chainsmokers--the whole kit and kaboodle. Nobody changes anybody. People have to change themselves. And it's the hardest work there is.

The First Day At Jamestown.

They Started to Hang Him...

□ He was a short, powerfully built man of 27 with a bristling beard and a military manner. He seemed marked for trouble from the very day that he and his fellow colonists sailed from London in December of 1606.

From his fertile imagination he related wild and fictional adventures. His boastful ambitions finally convinced his fellow-passengers that he intended murdering the expedition's leaders and proclaiming himself ruler. Either from fear, or to still his incessant tongue, the company was in the midst of hanging him when calmer heads interceded.

With winter coming on at the new Jamestown settlement, the colonists were starving when this braggert was able, at the risk of his life, to persuade Powhatan, the Indian ruler, to trade for enough food to get them through the winter.

Without the man they sought to hang, the Jamestown, Virginia Colony would have perished. His name? Captain John Smith.

160 sign-up for SEMO cage camp

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The emphasis will be on fundamentals and individual development when 160 youngsters between 10 and 18 years of age arrive July 20 for the first session of Southeast Missouri State University's basketball camp.

The session will run through July 26 and a second, week-long session will follow from July 27-Aug. 2.

Southeast Missouri State Coach Carroll Williams originally had planned only one session, but the response was so overwhelming that another session was added. Currently 85 youngsters have enrolled for the second week. A few more can be accommodated, Williams said.

All facets of the game will be covered during the camp. Each participant will take part in two, 45-minute scrimmages each evening. Besides actual court work, there will be lectures and films.

Special activities will include a mid-week pizza party, a free throw shooting contest, and an award and recognition program.

One of the highlights of the camp will be a special appearance by Don Chaney of the Boston Celtics.

Other members of the instructional staff will be Mitch Haskins of Charleston High School, Jim Hall of Dexter High School, Nick Lamphier of Kelly High School, Benton, Ed Arnzen of Notre Dame High School in Cape Girardeau, Thal Thrower of University High School in Cape Girardeau, Kevin Arand of Woodland High School, Marble Hill-Lutesville, and Jim Maurer of Central Junior High School in Cape Girardeau.

Three Southeast Missouri State graduate assistants are also on the staff. The three, who will assist Coach Williams with the varsity coaching chores at the university during the 1975-76 season, are Bob Ligdon, Ron Colyer, and Dick Wadlington. Ligdon was formerly at Mexico, Mo., High School and Colyer previously coached at Columbia High School.

Ten Southeast Missouri State basketball players will aid the camp staff. They are Garry Pirch, Larry Rogers, Tom Mitchell, Arvin Haynes, Randy Carter, Owen Suggs, Don Maurer, Russ Mothershead, Lennies McFerren. and Ernest McFerren.

Serving as camp counselors will be five area high school players--Lindy Duncan of Chaffee, Frankie Robinson of Lilbourn, Ricky Frazier of Charleston, Bill Bocksteigal of Pattonville, and Mike Kirby of St. Charles.

Blue hopes to repeat '71 feat

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The last time the American League won an All-Star Game was in 1971 when rookie Vida Blue was the starting and winning pitcher.

Blue, who went on to win the Cy Young and most Valuable Player awards that year, is being counted on to help get the American League back on the winning track Tuesday night at the 46th All-Star Game at County Stadium.

AL Manager Alvin Dark, who also manages Blue with the world champion Oakland A's, last week named the 25-year-old left-hander to oppose the National League, winner of 11 of the last 12 of these mid-season classics.

Walter Alston, manager of the National League, also was expected to choose a southpaw starting pitcher — John Matlack of the New York Mets — at today's news conference to give the starting line-ups. Matlack last pitched Friday and is known to be highly regarded by Alston, whose own Andy Messersmith — pitched Sunday — and Don Sutton — groin injury — aren't ready.

While Blue has a 12-7 record with a 3.10 earned run average this year, Matlack is 10-7 with a 3.54 ERA, highest of all All-Star pitchers.

He finished second in the voting for an outfield berth in a nationwide voting of fans. Bobby Bonds of the New York Yankees, an All-Star in 1971 and 1973 for the National League, and Joe Rudi of Oakland are the junior circuit's other outfield starters.

Stars win

Bill Waltrip's 13-year-old Jr. Babe Ruth all-stars rode the strong right arm of Scott Campbell to a first round 11-1 victory over Illmo-Scott City in the district tournament at Chaffee over the weekend.

Campbell fashioned a one-run five hitter and paced Sikeston's 10 hit assault with a three for four showing at the plate, including a double. Gary Laster and Mike Brashears also connected for doubles.

Sikeston battles the host at 3 p.m. this afternoon in the winners bracket of the double elimination tournament.

Hrabosky shows LA

ST. LOUIS (AP) — All+Star pitcher Mike Marshall has an ill-chosen fast ball to credit for the gratitude of the St. Louis Cardinals' Reggie Smith.

"He made a mistake," the free-swinging Smith said Sunday after batting the Cards to a 2-1 win over Marshall and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It was a nice mistake," added Smith, whose ninth-inning single came at the expense of a fast ball.

"I know what he wanted to do," Smith said. "He wanted to get a quick strike on me. That's something he did to me all last year. He'd get me 0-2 and then carve me up. I think he struck me out six times in a row."

Smith's atonement was savored by teammates Bake McBride, who scored on the hit, and Al Hrabosky, who pitched a laborious single inning of relief.

"It was a struggle to get myself up," maintained Hrabosky, 5-2, also the Cards' winner Saturday in a 2-1, 10-inning struggle settled by a McBride single.

"Yesterday was a big day for me," noted the stocky lefthander, who was overlooked for All+Star selection but in whose honor a Busch Stadium banner day was held.

"One way I did get myself up was because I knew the two pitchers were Marshall and myself."

Marshall, whose record dipped to 4-6, and Hrabosky staged their late duel after the Cards snapped a scoreless tie in the sixth on Lou Brock's single and Dave Lopes homered for Los Angeles in the eighth.

And preceding the final rally, Hrabosky emerged perspiringly from a threat that stemmed from John Hale's leadoff single in the top of the inning.

The 5-foot-11 Hrabosky induced Steve Garvey to lift a lazy fly to right field but, after Manny Mota fouled off a dozen pitches, walked the Dodger pinch-hitter with one out.

Ron Cey, however, obliged by popping to second baseman Ted Sizemore in shallow center field and Bill Russell grounded into a force play before Brock was retired to start the St. Louis ninth.

Marshall threw an off-target first pitch to the fleet McBride and was hammered on his next delivery for a triple to the wall in left-center.

"It was a screw ball," McBride said. "He got it up a little, but I'm not particular what I hit as long as it goes. When I was reaching second I saw they hadn't picked the ball up, so I kept going."

Sympathizing some but not all with Marshall was Smith, who will become the Dodger fireman's teammate for a night with the National League AllStars on Tuesday.

"I guess they could have walked me, and maybe that would have been the percentage thing to do, but with the way Marshall'd handled me I don't blame them for pitching to me," Smith said.

The defeat, the Dodgers' fourth in six games, sank Los Angeles 12½ games behind the high-flying Cincinnati Reds at the All+Star break in defense of its NL West Division title.

160 sign-up for SEMO cage camp

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The emphasis will be on fundamentals and individual development when 160 youngsters between 10 and 18 years of age arrive July 20 for the first session of Southeast Missouri State University's basketball camp.

The session will run through July 26 and a second, week-long session will follow from July 27-Aug. 2.

Southeast Missouri State Coach Carroll Williams originally had planned only one session, but the response was so overwhelming that another session was added. Currently 85 youngsters have enrolled for the second week. A few more can be accommodated, Williams said.

All facets of the game will be covered during the camp. Each participant will take part in two, 45-minute scrimmages each evening. Besides actual court work, there will be lectures and films.

Special activities will include a mid-week pizza party, a free throw shooting contest, and an award and recognition program.

One of the highlights of the camp will be a special appearance by Don Chaney of the Boston Celtics.

Other members of the instructional staff will be Mitch Haskins of Charleston High School, Jim Hall of Dexter High School, Nick Lamphier of Kelly High School, Benton, Ed Arnzen of Notre Dame High School in Cape Girardeau, Thal Thrower of University High School in Cape Girardeau, Kevin Arand of Woodland High School, Marble Hill-Lutesville, and Jim Maurer of Central Junior High School in Cape Girardeau.

Three Southeast Missouri State graduate assistants are also on the staff. The three, who will assist Coach Williams with the varsity coaching chores at the university during the 1975-76 season, are Bob Ligdon, Ron Colyer, and Dick Wadlington. Ligdon was formerly at Mexico, Mo., High School and Colyer previously coached at Columbia High School.

Ten Southeast Missouri State basketball players will aid the camp staff. They are Garry Pirch, Larry Rogers, Tom Mitchell, Arvin Haynes, Randy Carter, Owen Suggs, Don Maurer, Russ Mothershead, Lennies McFerren. and Ernest McFerren.

Serving as camp counselors will be five area high school players--Lindy Duncan of Chaffee, Frankie Robinson of Lilbourn, Ricky Frazier of Charleston, Bill Bocksteigal of Pattonville, and Mike Kirby of St. Charles.

Blue hopes to repeat '71 feat

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The last time the American League won an All-Star Game was in 1971 when rookie Vida Blue was the starting and winning pitcher.

Blue, who went on to win the Cy Young and most Valuable Player awards that year, is being counted on to help get the American League back on the winning track Tuesday night at the 46th All-Star Game at County Stadium.

AL Manager Alvin Dark, who also manages Blue with the world champion Oakland A's, last week named the 25-year-old left-hander to oppose the National League, winner of 11 of the last 12 of these mid-season classics.

Walter Alston, manager of the National League, also was expected to choose a southpaw starting pitcher — John Matlack of the New York Mets — at today's news conference to give the starting line-ups. Matlack last pitched Friday and is known to be highly regarded by Alston, whose own Andy Messersmith — pitched Sunday — and Don Sutton — groin injury — aren't ready.

While Blue has a 12-7 record with a 3.10 earned run average this year, Matlack is 10-7 with a 3.54 ERA, highest of all All-Star pitchers.

He finished second in the voting for an outfield berth in a nationwide voting of fans. Bobby Bonds of the New York Yankees, an All-Star in 1971 and 1973 for the National League, and Joe Rudi of Oakland are the junior circuit's other outfield starters.

Stars win

Bill Waltrip's 13-year-old Jr. Babe Ruth all-stars rode the strong right arm of Scott Campbell to a first round 11-1 victory over Illmo-Scott City in the district tournament at Chaffee over the weekend.

Campbell fashioned a one-run five hitter and paced Sikeston's 10 hit assault with a three for four showing at the plate, including a double. Gary Laster and Mike Brashears also connected for doubles.

Sikeston battles the host at 3 p.m. this afternoon in the winners bracket of the double elimination tournament.

Hrabosky shows LA

ST. LOUIS (AP) — All+Star pitcher Mike Marshall has an ill-chosen fast ball to credit for the gratitude of the St. Louis Cardinals' Reggie Smith.

"He made a mistake," the free-swinging Smith said Sunday after batting the Cards to a 2-1 win over Marshall and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It was a nice mistake," added Smith, whose ninth-inning single came at the expense of a fast ball.

"I know what he wanted to do," Smith said. "He wanted to get a quick strike on me. That's something he did to me all last year. He'd get me 0-2 and then carve me up. I think he struck me out six times in a row."

Smith's atonement was savored by teammates Bake McBride, who scored on the hit, and Al Hrabosky, who pitched a laborious single inning of relief.

"It was a struggle to get myself up," maintained Hrabosky, 5-2, also the Cards' winner Saturday in a 2-1, 10-inning struggle settled by a McBride single.

"Yesterday was a big day for me," noted the stocky lefthander, who was overlooked for All+Star selection but in whose honor a Busch Stadium banner day was held.

"One way I did get myself up was because I knew the two pitchers were Marshall and myself."

Marshall, whose record dipped to 4-6, and Hrabosky staged their late duel after the Cards snapped a scoreless tie in the sixth on Lou Brock's single and Dave Lopes homered for Los Angeles in the eighth.

And preceding the final rally, Hrabosky emerged perspiringly from a threat that stemmed from John Hale's leadoff single in the top of the inning.

The 5-foot-11 Hrabosky induced Steve Garvey to lift a lazy fly to right field but, after Manny Mota fouled off a dozen pitches, walked the Dodger pinch-hitter with one out.

Ron Cey, however, obliged by popping to second baseman Ted Sizemore in shallow center field and Bill Russell grounded into a force play before Brock was retired to start the St. Louis ninth.

Marshall threw an off-target first pitch to the fleet McBride and was hammered on his next delivery for a triple to the wall in left-center.

"It was a screw ball," McBride said. "He got it up a little, but I'm not particular what I hit as long as it goes. When I was reaching second I saw they hadn't picked the ball up, so I kept going."

Sympathizing some but not all with Marshall was Smith, who will become the Dodger fireman's teammate for a night with the National League AllStars on Tuesday.

"I guess they could have walked me, and maybe that would have been the percentage thing to do, but with the way Marshall'd handled me I don't blame them for pitching to me," Smith said.

The defeat, the Dodgers' fourth in six games, sank Los Angeles 12½ games behind the high-flying Cincinnati Reds at the All+Star break in defense of its NL West Division title.

WORLD'S LARGEST RACE

Three thousand street rods representing all 50 states, including Hawaii and Alaska, will converge on Memphis at the Fairgrounds, July 31 through August 3.

The 6th annual Street Rod Nationals, a convention of enthusiasts of early make cars which have been modified and updated, will draw 3,000 pre-1949 cars and upwards of 15,000 people during the four days, making it the world's largest hot rod event.

A strictly-enforced and intriguing rule of the sponsoring National Street Rod Association is that all participants must drive their cars to Memphis. Any sort of trailering or towing is banned.

The cars, ranging from Model T and Model A Fords to early Chevys and other makes, include coupes, sedans, roadsters and even trucks, valued between $3,000 and $10,000 per vehicle.

They are equipped with remodeled suspension systems for safety; have modern brake systems, such as disc brakes; late-model engines, usually small displacement V8s; and they are dressed out with custom paint and an abundance of chrome platings. Modernization also includes comfort accessories such as air conditioning in sedans and coupes, as well as stereo sound systems.

The Street Rod Nationals is open to the public with hours from noon to 9 p.m. daily except Sunday when the hours will be noon to 5 p.m. Admission is $3 per adult; children under 16 admitted free when accompanied by an adult.

AL RESERVES

It figured that Alvin Dark wouldn't go strictly by the numbers when he filled out his roster of American League all-stars.

The numbers were the record 7,357,811 ballots cased by the fans for the players of their choice. As a result, Dark's Oakland A';s and the New York Yankees have a monopoly on the starting lineup next Tuesday night in Milwaukee.

But Dark also ignored some of those fan-mailed numbers. Being runner-up in the voting didn't automatically mean being an all-star reserve. In some cases the second-place, third-place and further-down-the-list-place players were bypassed by Dark.

The least surprising reserve named Thursday was Milwaukee's Hank Aaron, named to his 25th all-star squad and his first as an American Leaguer. The Brewers' designated hitter was eighth in voting among AL outfielders.

Aaron was selected to 24 in the National League with the Milwaukee and Atlanta Braves sitting out an all-star game in 1962 with an injury and was traded to the Brewers last winter after surpassing Babe Ruth's record 714 career home runs. If he plays Tuesday night he'll tie the record of 24 all-star appearances by Willie Mays and Stan Musial.

Aaron said he was proud to be chosen, but said he was not sure whether he would be able to play because of an injured shoulder.

Oakland's Claudell Washington and Cleveland's George Hendrick were also selected by Dark as reserve outfielders, despite the fact they didn't even show up among the fans' top 12 choices.

The remaining two backup outfielders are Boston rookie Fred Lynn, who managed fourth in the voting as a write-in candidate, and Kansas City's Hal McRae, sixth in the balloting but chosen over the Texas Rangers' slump-riodden Jeff Burroughs.

Lynn and first baseman Mike Hargrove of the Rangers were the only runners-up in the voting who were named to the AL roster by Dark.

Catchers Ray Fosse of Oakland, Carlton Fisk of Boston and Ellie Rodriquez of California were 2-3-4 in the voting but Dark opted for fifth-place Bill Freehan of Detroit as his No. 2 man.

The New York Yankees' Chris Chambliss and Baltimore's Lee May were 3-4 among first basemen but the next two in line - Carl Yastrzemski of Boston and George Scott of Milwaukee - got the nod from Dark.

Similarly, Dark bypassed Kansas City's Cookie Rojax, Baltimore's Bobby Grich and the Yanks' Sandy Alomar to name Jorge Orta of Chicago as a reserve second baseman.

He also overlooked Oakland's Sal Bando and Cleveland's Buddy Bell to pick rookie Dave Chalk of California at third base and chose Chicago's Bucky Dent over runner-up candidate Robin Young of Milwaukee for reserve shortstop duty.

The manager of the world champion A's has plenty of "home-grown" talent with which to work. Oakland uniforms will be on seven of the 28 players, the fourth straight year that the three-time world champions have outnumbered the remaining 11 AL clubs.

FLY CASTING
The Overhead Cast
Second of A Two Part Series

Anyone can learn to cast a fly well with a little practice, the proper equipment and patience. In our last column we outlined how to go about selecting the proper equipment. Today we're going to get you started on casting. I would suggest stepping out to your backyard, providing you don't have too many trees or a clothesline to tangle you up. Fly fishing, as golf, requires the proper grip. Turn the palm of your casting hand up, then place the forward part of the rod handle across the second joints of your fingers and close your hand. Turn your wrist until the line of your thumb, which should be along the top of the handle, is parallel with the ground. Keep your thumb in that position and press down on the handle. The reel is naturally hanging straight down.

Virgil Ward

The cast most often used is the overhead cast. This is the first one to master and its same principles apply to the sidearm cast and to the forward part of the roll cast.

Imagine for a moment that you're about to pound a nail with a hammer. Your arm, wrist and hand will move as a unit. Place emphasis on your arm rather than your wrist to gain better accuracy with less strain.

If you're right handed, stand easily, facing forward with your weight on your right foot. Take off about 20 feet of line through the rod guides and lay it out straight on the lawn.

Hold the rod so the tip is just above a line parallel to the ground, grip the slack line in your left hand. Face the line running across the lawn

Bring the rod up slowly, lifting your upper arm and at the same time bending your elbow to bring your forearm toward your face. Hold the line with your left hand securely so no slack line slips through the guides as you raise the rod.

Raising the rod, your forearm and rod will come to a 45-degree angle. Give the rod a sharp lift, make the forward part of the cast by slowly starting to lower your upper arm and at the same time, pushing forward with your forearm.

Continue this movement until your arm and rod approach a 45-degree angle. Push hard with your thumb and wrist to make the upper part of the rod drive the line forward.

The line will straighten out in front of you, as it does, let go of the slack line you've been holding with your left hand. This momentum will pull the line forward through the rod guides. The line will shoot through the guides, as it falls, raise the rod tip slightly to drop the fly smoothly on the grass.

To feed out more line to reach a particular spot, go through the full overhead cast but before the fly touches down begin a second backcast. To lengthen line, release some or all of the slack you hold in your left hand as you bring the rod forward. Repeat this "false" casting, peeling off additional line until you have the fly over the spot you've chosen.

If you strive for shorter casts you'll gain more accuracy, It will also drop the fly on the water before the leader and reduce line slack.

Don't be easily disappointed when you start fly casting. With a little practice you can master the art and join the special group of fishermen who know the thrill of fly action!

Good luck with your fishing.

Oakland leads AL West by 8½

Wave bye-bye to the Oakland A's.

Those perennial world champions are not only first in the American League West at the All-Star break — but they're first by a whopping 8½ games. "The pressure is on the other teams now," said Oakland's Bill North after the A's beat the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 Sunday and moved further ahead of the pack.

Traditionally, the team ahead by the All-Star game winds up winner of its division.

The second-place Kansas City Royals dropped another notch behind the A's by losing an 8-4 decision to the Detroit Tigers. The Boston Red Sox, meanwhile, improved their lead in the American League East to 4½ games by whipping the Texas Rangers 7-5.

In Sunday's other American League games, the Cleveland Indians nipped the California Angels 8-7 and the Chicago White Sox stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 5-0. Rain postponed action between Minnesota and New York.

Billy Williams' two-run double capped a three-run second inning and Ken Holtzman won his fifth straight game and 11th of the season as Oakland edged Baltimore. Holtzman needed relief help from Jim Todd and Rollie Fingers after Brooks Robinson hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning, cutting Oakland's lead to one run.

The A's scored all their runs off Ross Grimsley, 5-11, who lasted only 1 2-3 innings.

Tigers 8, Royals 4

Aurelio Rodriguez belted three hits and triggered two rallies as Detroit erased a three-run deficit in the first inning and went on to beat Kansas City. Rodriguez doubled off loser Dennis Leonard, 5-5, and scored the Tigers' first run on Gary Sutherland's sacrifice fly in the third. He added singles in the next two innings when the Tigers erupted for four and three-run rallies.

Red Sox 7, Rangers 5

Rookie sensation Fred Lynn drove in four runs and veteran Carl Yastrzemski had five straight hits, leading Boston over Texas for the Red Sox' seventh consecutive victory. Boston got a first-inning run on doubles by Yastrzemski and Lynn, then chased Steve Hargan, 6-5, with three more in the third. Bernie Carbo and Yastrzemski singled, Lynn doubled them home, then Jim rice singled.

Indians 8, Angels 7

Duane Kuiper's tie-breaking single and Buddy Bell's two-run double highlighted a five-run seventh inning that helped Cleveland beat California. It was Cleveland's 13th straight victory over the Angels in Anaheim, equalling the American League mark for consecutive victories against one team on the road. The New York Yankees did it to the old St. Louis Browns 13 times during 1939-40.

White Sox 5, Brewers 0

Wilbur Wood pitched a three-hitter and Nyls Nyman drove in two runs, leading Chicago over Milwaukee. Chicago gave Wood, 7-13, all the offense he needed with four runs in the fourth inning. Three walks by Bill Travers, 4-3, filled the bases with two out, then Nyman lined a full-count pitch to right field for two runs. Bill Stein's run-scoring single chased Travers and Nyman scored from third on the front end of a double steal.

WORLD'S LARGEST RACE

Three thousand street rods representing all 50 states, including Hawaii and Alaska, will converge on Memphis at the Fairgrounds, July 31 through August 3.

The 6th annual Street Rod Nationals, a convention of enthusiasts of early make cars which have been modified and updated, will draw 3,000 pre-1949 cars and upwards of 15,000 people during the four days, making it the world's largest hot rod event.

A strictly-enforced and intriguing rule of the sponsoring National Street Rod Association is that all participants must drive their cars to Memphis. Any sort of trailering or towing is banned.

The cars, ranging from Model T and Model A Fords to early Chevys and other makes, include coupes, sedans, roadsters and even trucks, valued between $3,000 and $10,000 per vehicle.

They are equipped with remodeled suspension systems for safety; have modern brake systems, such as disc brakes; late-model engines, usually small displacement V8s; and they are dressed out with custom paint and an abundance of chrome platings. Modernization also includes comfort accessories such as air conditioning in sedans and coupes, as well as stereo sound systems.

The Street Rod Nationals is open to the public with hours from noon to 9 p.m. daily except Sunday when the hours will be noon to 5 p.m. Admission is $3 per adult; children under 16 admitted free when accompanied by an adult.

AL RESERVES

It figured that Alvin Dark wouldn't go strictly by the numbers when he filled out his roster of American League all-stars.

The numbers were the record 7,357,811 ballots cased by the fans for the players of their choice. As a result, Dark's Oakland A';s and the New York Yankees have a monopoly on the starting lineup next Tuesday night in Milwaukee.

But Dark also ignored some of those fan-mailed numbers. Being runner-up in the voting didn't automatically mean being an all-star reserve. In some cases the second-place, third-place and further-down-the-list-place players were bypassed by Dark.

The least surprising reserve named Thursday was Milwaukee's Hank Aaron, named to his 25th all-star squad and his first as an American Leaguer. The Brewers' designated hitter was eighth in voting among AL outfielders.

Aaron was selected to 24 in the National League with the Milwaukee and Atlanta Braves sitting out an all-star game in 1962 with an injury and was traded to the Brewers last winter after surpassing Babe Ruth's record 714 career home runs. If he plays Tuesday night he'll tie the record of 24 all-star appearances by Willie Mays and Stan Musial.

Aaron said he was proud to be chosen, but said he was not sure whether he would be able to play because of an injured shoulder.

Oakland's Claudell Washington and Cleveland's George Hendrick were also selected by Dark as reserve outfielders, despite the fact they didn't even show up among the fans' top 12 choices.

The remaining two backup outfielders are Boston rookie Fred Lynn, who managed fourth in the voting as a write-in candidate, and Kansas City's Hal McRae, sixth in the balloting but chosen over the Texas Rangers' slump-riodden Jeff Burroughs.

Lynn and first baseman Mike Hargrove of the Rangers were the only runners-up in the voting who were named to the AL roster by Dark.

Catchers Ray Fosse of Oakland, Carlton Fisk of Boston and Ellie Rodriquez of California were 2-3-4 in the voting but Dark opted for fifth-place Bill Freehan of Detroit as his No. 2 man.

The New York Yankees' Chris Chambliss and Baltimore's Lee May were 3-4 among first basemen but the next two in line - Carl Yastrzemski of Boston and George Scott of Milwaukee - got the nod from Dark.

Similarly, Dark bypassed Kansas City's Cookie Rojax, Baltimore's Bobby Grich and the Yanks' Sandy Alomar to name Jorge Orta of Chicago as a reserve second baseman.

He also overlooked Oakland's Sal Bando and Cleveland's Buddy Bell to pick rookie Dave Chalk of California at third base and chose Chicago's Bucky Dent over runner-up candidate Robin Young of Milwaukee for reserve shortstop duty.

The manager of the world champion A's has plenty of "home-grown" talent with which to work. Oakland uniforms will be on seven of the 28 players, the fourth straight year that the three-time world champions have outnumbered the remaining 11 AL clubs.

FLY CASTING
The Overhead Cast
Second of A Two Part Series

Anyone can learn to cast a fly well with a little practice, the proper equipment and patience. In our last column we outlined how to go about selecting the proper equipment. Today we're going to get you started on casting. I would suggest stepping out to your backyard, providing you don't have too many trees or a clothesline to tangle you up. Fly fishing, as golf, requires the proper grip. Turn the palm of your casting hand up, then place the forward part of the rod handle across the second joints of your fingers and close your hand. Turn your wrist until the line of your thumb, which should be along the top of the handle, is parallel with the ground. Keep your thumb in that position and press down on the handle. The reel is naturally hanging straight down.

Virgil Ward

The cast most often used is the overhead cast. This is the first one to master and its same principles apply to the sidearm cast and to the forward part of the roll cast.

Imagine for a moment that you're about to pound a nail with a hammer. Your arm, wrist and hand will move as a unit. Place emphasis on your arm rather than your wrist to gain better accuracy with less strain.

If you're right handed, stand easily, facing forward with your weight on your right foot. Take off about 20 feet of line through the rod guides and lay it out straight on the lawn.

Hold the rod so the tip is just above a line parallel to the ground, grip the slack line in your left hand. Face the line running across the lawn

Bring the rod up slowly, lifting your upper arm and at the same time bending your elbow to bring your forearm toward your face. Hold the line with your left hand securely so no slack line slips through the guides as you raise the rod.

Raising the rod, your forearm and rod will come to a 45-degree angle. Give the rod a sharp lift, make the forward part of the cast by slowly starting to lower your upper arm and at the same time, pushing forward with your forearm.

Continue this movement until your arm and rod approach a 45-degree angle. Push hard with your thumb and wrist to make the upper part of the rod drive the line forward.

The line will straighten out in front of you, as it does, let go of the slack line you've been holding with your left hand. This momentum will pull the line forward through the rod guides. The line will shoot through the guides, as it falls, raise the rod tip slightly to drop the fly smoothly on the grass.

To feed out more line to reach a particular spot, go through the full overhead cast but before the fly touches down begin a second backcast. To lengthen line, release some or all of the slack you hold in your left hand as you bring the rod forward. Repeat this "false" casting, peeling off additional line until you have the fly over the spot you've chosen.

If you strive for shorter casts you'll gain more accuracy, It will also drop the fly on the water before the leader and reduce line slack.

Don't be easily disappointed when you start fly casting. With a little practice you can master the art and join the special group of fishermen who know the thrill of fly action!

Good luck with your fishing.

Cuba embargo before OAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Organization of American States is expected to take up the Cuba embargo this week with some indications the 11-year trade ban may be eased.

The 12-day meeting in Costa Rica beginning Wednesday marks the third time in as many years the Cuba embargo has come up, and American officials believe there is a better-than-even chance the OAS will either repeal or substantially weaken the embargo at this meeting. That view is disputed by some Latin American diplomats.

One reason American officials foresee affirmative action is that the United States itself is prepared for the first time to support a change in the 11-year-old OAS policy.

U.S. officials see the embargo as a contentious element in hemispheric relations but they say no effort will be made at the meeting to influence the position of other countries. The American delegation will be headed by OAS Ambassador William S. Mailliard.

Eight months ago in Ecuador, the last time the OAS voted on a repeal proposal, 12 of the 21 nations were in favor but the embargo continued because the vote fell short of the required two-thirds majority of 14.

At Quito, the United States joined Brazil, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Bolivia and Haiti in abstaining, while Chile, Uruguay and Paraguay cast negative votes. The embargo ostensibly forbids OAS members from establishing trade and diplomatic relations with Cuba but a number of countries have ignored the ban.

One common belief is that the delegates at Costa Rica will shy away from a resolution calling for outright repeal of the embargo and push instead for a so-called "freedom of action" resolution.

This would leave the embargo intact but permit each country to establish the kind of relations it desires with Cuba.

The advantage of this alternative is that, while it is unacceptable to the anti-Cuba hardliners, it might win the support of countries that are cool toward Cuba but that prefer not to obstruct the majority will.

State members approve delegate selection plan

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A new plan for the selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention was approved by Missouri members of the party Saturday, and officials said they expected it to receive an okay from the Democrats' national Compliance Review Commission.

The plan would be used to select delegates at township, ward, county and congressional district meetings. Persons attending those meetings would be polled as to which presidential candidate they support. Each candidate receiving more than 15 per cent of the vote at those meetings would be allotted a percentage of the number of delegates available.

The proportional selection of delegates replaces the winner-take-all method used previsously when presidential candidates with the most supporters collected all the delegates available.

"This is very complicated and we're all in the process of learning," said James E. Spain, party chairman as he thanked state committee members who helped draft the new formula.

Spain said the plan, which is the result of recommendations made by a special national commission that drew up the rules for next year's convention, would be sent to the commission for approval. Copies of the plan will be distributed statewide, Spain said, and party officials will tour the state to explain it.

Missouri will send 71 delegates to the convention. Of the state's total number, 75 per cent of 54 will come from the state's 10 congressional districts and the remaining 17 will be selected at a statewide convention.

The number of delegates allotted to each congressional district depends on its population and its Democratic voter turnout at the last two presidential elections.

Israel and Lebanon renew fight

By The Associated Press

Israeli planes attacked a Palestinian refugee camp in Lebanon twice, and four persons were reported killed and 22 wounded. Several hours later rockets from southern Lebanon hit the Israeli town of Nahariya, slightly wounding two women, the Israeli command announced.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin reported to the Israeli cabinet on his meeting with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. A communique said the government would continue "the process of clarification and negotiation with the purpose of reaching a positive conclusion."

The Palestine guerrillas claimed that their missile and gun crews hit two of the Israeli Phantom jets that on Sunday rocketed and strafed the Ein Helweh refugee camp near Sidon, 30 miles south of Beirut. The Lebanese Defense Ministry reported one of the jets was seen crashing in flames into the Mediterranean, and Palestinians in the camp shouted with joy and danced about at the news.

But the Israeli command said: "All our planes returned safely to base."

Residents of the camp said two reconnaissance planes flew over shortly before the attack, and this alerted the antiaircraft crews and sent residents rushing to protective trenches. They said the first attack lasted 20 minutes, and the second attack came 20 minutes later.

The rockets destroyed a guerrilla radio station and damaged a number of huts and a mosque.

The Israelis said a plant manufacturing war material for guerrillas was among the targets, but residents of the camp denied such a plant was in the camp.

Palestinian sources said those killed were a woman, a farm worker and two guerrillas.

The Israeli command also announced that an Israeli navy ship supplied fuel to a Lebanese freighter Saturday that was drifting 20 miles northwest of the Sinai coast. The Lebanese captain thanked the Israelis for the "superb treatment," the announcement said.

Rabin on his return from his meeting with Kissinger said he was "more optimistic" about chances for an agreement with Egypt. But cabinet spokesman Gershon Avner said the Israeli ambassador to the United States, Simcha Dinitz, would return to Washington to work with the State Department on the further clarifications sought by the cabinet.

Carter visits Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The United States needs a national policy in all facets of government, otherwise "we will continue to wander aimlessly," says former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter.

Making Missouri the 41st state he has visited in his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, Carter said, "In the absence of a clear-cut policy, everybody is timid."

He gave the key address at a Democrat barbeque here Saturday night.

Carter told the audience that the voters are "just as disgusted with unkept promises and unfair laws and regulations as they are with governmental secrecy and dishonesty."

"It is not enough just to be open and honest and sincere; you also have to listen to what people need and do something about it," he said.

At a news conference earlier, the 50-year-old U.S. Naval Academy graduate said the progress of his campaign so far has been "adequate." He said a recent poll indicated 50 per cent of those questioned had recognized his name, while only 7 per cent knew it at the beginning of his campaign in December.

Speaking softly but with confidence, Carter said, "I don't intend to lose. I'm not interested in being vice president. I intend to go all the way."

He admitted that Alabama Gov. George Wallace would be his major opponent in the Florida primary next year, but promised he would "meet Wallace headon."

Carter is the second Democratic presidential contender to come to Missouri seeking delegates. Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen had sought to charm state Democrats in the Spring when he gave the key address at the party's Jackson Day celebration in Springfield.

Grain probe to continue

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One phase of a federal investigation of the grain exporting industry should end by Aug. 15, but the larger investigation will continue, U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinghouse said Sunday.

Gallinghouse would not say what the new grand jury investigation would involve.

The 15-month long probe into allegations of bribery and theft in the handling of U.S. grain has produced 20 indictments in New Orleans and Houston.

The Des Moines Sunday Register reported in Sunday editions that more indictments — involving top officials of four unnamed grain companies — are expected in the next two to three weeks.

Gallinghouse said he did not know the source for the Register story and said he could not predict what action the grand jury will take when it concludes its investigation.

Upkeep funds withheld

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—State officials have decided to withhold 10 per cent of the normal operating budget for the Division of Design and Construction to handle any maintenance emergencies that occur in the next 12 months.

Commissioner of Administration J. Neil Nielsen told the state Board of Public Buildings Friday that the action has been made necessary by the legislature's deletion of any funds for regular maintenance for the four main state buildings in Jefferson City.

"We've had to do some serious thinking because of no appropriation in this area," Nielsen told Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who heads the board. He said the amount of withheld money is about $40,000.

"This will give us a small amount to handle an emergency problem," Nielsen said. That emergency fund has already been tapped because of a problem at one of the buildings, Design and Construction Chief Jack Cooper said.

"Our $40,000 could go in one swat," Cooper acknowledged, noting thatone major maintenance problem could wipe out the fund.

The board, which also includes Lt. Gov. William Phelps and Atty. Gen. john Danforth, also authorized studies for the location of proposed state office buildings in both St. Louis And Springfield.

Both studies will cost between $20,000 and $25,000 and will be conducted in two stages and neither will be limited to any specific building.

House leaders had originally strongly backed acquisition of the Contineneta Building for a mid-town St. Louis state office site, but they have since indicated that they may consider other locations within a specific area.

Final approval to go ahead with construction of a $4 million state laboratory and data processing center was also given by the Board. The structure will be located just west of the Capitol building.

In related developments, Nielsen announced the state will receive $975,000 in federal funds for state, regional and community planning activities.

He said $500,000 of the grant will be divided between 15 regional planning commissions and 23 communities and counties with the rest being used by the state.

The Joan Little murder trial begins with jury selection

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Quietly and with little show of emotion, Joan Little took a seat at the defense table today for the start of her trial for first-degree murder.

The 21-year-old black woman faces a mandatory death penalty if she is convicted on the charge she murdered Clarence Alligood, 62, a white farmer who worked as night jailer in the Beaufort County Jail at Washington, N.C.

Miss Little, who was an inmate, contends Alligood tried to rape her in her cell, that she stabbed him in self-defense and then ran for her life.

A prospective jury list of about 300 persons was available for use at the trial in Wake County Superior Court.

Jury selection was expected to take two weeks. Judge Hamilton Hobgood has indicated the entire proceeding could go on for six weeks.

Sheriff's deputies were stationed at each door to the courtroom in downtown Raleigh today. Persons entering the public area of the courtroom were required to pass under inspection of electronic metal detectors.

The trial follows nearly a year of legal maneuvering. The young woman's case has become an issue for civil rights, women's rights and prison reform groups.

A group of supporters held a rain-shortened prayer session on the steps of the courthouse Sunday night. Others gathered this morning for a march through downtown Raleigh.

Last week, Judge Carlos Murray Jr., who is not involved in the trial, said he believed the prosecution's case is weak. At a Raleigh rape crisis meeting, Murray said: "From what I've seen reported, I don't see how this case could go to a jury."

And on Sunday, the Rev. Leon White organized an all-night vigil at the courthouse. About 80 supporters of Miss Little applauded as the Rev. Mr. White said "justice is dead" for the poor in this state.

Rain interrupted the ceremony, but the Rev. Mr. White said the group would remain until later today. The civil rights activist has challenged Superior Court Judge James P. Bailey's injunction barring assemblies, demonstrations or distribution of literature at the courthouse while the trial is in progress. A federal court hearing on the challenge is scheduled for Thursday.

Miss Little maintains she killed Alligood in self defense when he tried to rape her in her cell at the Beaufort County Jail in Washington, N.C., on Aug. 27. Miss Little, the only female prisoner in the jail at the time, was confined while appealing a breaking and entering conviction.

She fled after the slaying, but voluntarily surrendered to authorities eight days later with assurances that she would not be returned to Beaufort County but would be held at the Correctional Center for Women in Raleigh.

She has recently been free on $115,000 bond posted by the Southern Poverty Law Center of Montgomery, Ala., and the Joan Little Defense Fund of Durham, N.C.

The prosecution is expected to argue that the slaying was part of an escape plot. Prosecutors have said Miss Little took the murder weapon — an icepick — from the jailer's desk when he let her out of her cell to use a telephone in his office earlier in the evening. They said she later lured Alligood to her cell and stabbed him 11 times.

A medical examiner's report said semen was encrusted on the thigh of the jailer's body, which was found naked from the waist down.

The case of the creaky dancing lady

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Alfredo owned a dancing school where he taught high-pressured salesmanship to his instructors. As example, he taught them how to dissuade a potential student from consulting a lawyer, spouse or friend before signing up for lessons.

Stanley was his star pupil. He sold creaky Martha, who was 68 years of age, a total of 4,750 hours of dancing lessons at a cost of $35,000.

At the end of three years, Martha realized that while her purse was lighter, she was as heavy on her feet as ever. Consequently, she sued Alfredo to get her money back.

"She's not entitled to get it back," protested Alfredo in court. "She signed up for lessons and got every one that was coming to her."

"I only signed up because Stanley and Alfredo told me that I had what it took to become a professional dancer," responded Martha. They even told me that I made Ginger Rogers look like a beginner. In all fairness to Ginger, they were just lying to me to get my money."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Alfredo give danicng Martha back her money?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that since the beginning of time, people have persisted in selling their birthright for a mess of pottage and courts cannot protect against a person's folly or bad judgment. However, concluded the judge, courts can insist upon honesty in selling. And in this case, Alfredo conducted a calculated course of intentional misrepresentation. His selling techniques transcended the utmost limit of reason and fairness.

B-12 cures pernicious anemia

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please tell me what kind of pills are taken in place of B-12 shots for pernicious anemia?

Do people with pernicious anemia ever die directly from it if they take medication faithfully? I know of a person who lived to be 80 years old and took pills since he was 40. He never had shots.

I would appreciate it if you would enlighten me on this.

DEAR READER — Solving pernicious anemia is one of the real triumphs of medicine in the 20th century. Many people died from it until recent times. Marie Curie, the famed discoverer of radium died with it in 1934. Death in these cases was from overwhelming and uncontrollable anemia, causing abnormal function of many organs but ending up causing heart failure. Vitamin B-12 is essential in the normal cell regeneration process. Our body constantly regenerates itself. The splitting or doubling of cells to do this depends in part on B-12.

The anemia is prominent because we must manufacture so many new red blood cells each day. Your body manufactures about three million new red blood cells every second. Your red cells only last about 120 days. When you can't do this because of vitamin B-12 deficiency an anemia is one of the earlier manifestations of the disease. All other cells that must regenerate rapidly in the body are also affected.

The lining of the small intestine is normally replaced every three days, and this replacement requires B-12. It is not surprising that digestive complaints are common in pernicious anemia.

Dogs also get pernicious anemia. A clever physican, Dr. George Whipple, from the Universtiy of Rochester, showed you could feed raw beef liver to dogs and cure them. Then two Harvard physicians, Drs. Richards Minot and William Murphy demonstrated that you could treat humans by feeding them liver. I suspect that is where the idea gained strength that you should have liver regularly. The truth is today you can get anything in liver from other sources.

By 1929 it was realized that some cases of pernicious anemia occurred because an important enzyme manufactured by the stomach was missing. The enzyme was needed to enable the body to absorb vitamin B-12. The real problem people were having was an inability to absorb vitamin B-12, even when the diet contained adequate amounts. The large intake of liver worked because it provided so much B-12 that some of it, enough to solve the problem, got absorbed in spite of the loss of the vital stomach enzyme.

The poor ability to absorb B-12 is why shots have been used. The B-12 given this way gets directly into the body rather than being lost through the digestive tract.

You can take very large doses of B-12 and absorb enough to help, but most doctors think this is not nearly as reliable as injections to avoid the problem of poor absorption.

A related problem is folic deficiency that is much like pernicious anemia. These patients can take folic acid by mouth. For more information about these vitamins and pernicious anemia send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, New York, NY 10019, and ask for The Health Letter number 4-5 on Pernicious Anemia.

Upkeep funds withheld

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—State officials have decided to withhold 10 per cent of the normal operating budget for the Division of Design and Construction to handle any maintenance emergencies that occur in the next 12 months.

Commissioner of Administration J. Neil Nielsen told the state Board of Public Buildings Friday that the action has been made necessary by the legislature's deletion of any funds for regular maintenance for the four main state buildings in Jefferson City.

"We've had to do some serious thinking because of no appropriation in this area," Nielsen told Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who heads the board. He said the amount of withheld money is about $40,000.

"This will give us a small amount to handle an emergency problem," Nielsen said. That emergency fund has already been tapped because of a problem at one of the buildings, Design and Construction Chief Jack Cooper said.

"Our $40,000 could go in one swat," Cooper acknowledged, noting thatone major maintenance problem could wipe out the fund.

The board, which also includes Lt. Gov. William Phelps and Atty. Gen. john Danforth, also authorized studies for the location of proposed state office buildings in both St. Louis And Springfield.

Both studies will cost between $20,000 and $25,000 and will be conducted in two stages and neither will be limited to any specific building.

House leaders had originally strongly backed acquisition of the Contineneta Building for a mid-town St. Louis state office site, but they have since indicated that they may consider other locations within a specific area.

Final approval to go ahead with construction of a $4 million state laboratory and data processing center was also given by the Board. The structure will be located just west of the Capitol building.

In related developments, Nielsen announced the state will receive $975,000 in federal funds for state, regional and community planning activities.

He said $500,000 of the grant will be divided between 15 regional planning commissions and 23 communities and counties with the rest being used by the state.

The Joan Little murder trial begins with jury selection

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Quietly and with little show of emotion, Joan Little took a seat at the defense table today for the start of her trial for first-degree murder.

The 21-year-old black woman faces a mandatory death penalty if she is convicted on the charge she murdered Clarence Alligood, 62, a white farmer who worked as night jailer in the Beaufort County Jail at Washington, N.C.

Miss Little, who was an inmate, contends Alligood tried to rape her in her cell, that she stabbed him in self-defense and then ran for her life.

A prospective jury list of about 300 persons was available for use at the trial in Wake County Superior Court.

Jury selection was expected to take two weeks. Judge Hamilton Hobgood has indicated the entire proceeding could go on for six weeks.

Sheriff's deputies were stationed at each door to the courtroom in downtown Raleigh today. Persons entering the public area of the courtroom were required to pass under inspection of electronic metal detectors.

The trial follows nearly a year of legal maneuvering. The young woman's case has become an issue for civil rights, women's rights and prison reform groups.

A group of supporters held a rain-shortened prayer session on the steps of the courthouse Sunday night. Others gathered this morning for a march through downtown Raleigh.

Last week, Judge Carlos Murray Jr., who is not involved in the trial, said he believed the prosecution's case is weak. At a Raleigh rape crisis meeting, Murray said: "From what I've seen reported, I don't see how this case could go to a jury."

And on Sunday, the Rev. Leon White organized an all-night vigil at the courthouse. About 80 supporters of Miss Little applauded as the Rev. Mr. White said "justice is dead" for the poor in this state.

Rain interrupted the ceremony, but the Rev. Mr. White said the group would remain until later today. The civil rights activist has challenged Superior Court Judge James P. Bailey's injunction barring assemblies, demonstrations or distribution of literature at the courthouse while the trial is in progress. A federal court hearing on the challenge is scheduled for Thursday.

Miss Little maintains she killed Alligood in self defense when he tried to rape her in her cell at the Beaufort County Jail in Washington, N.C., on Aug. 27. Miss Little, the only female prisoner in the jail at the time, was confined while appealing a breaking and entering conviction.

She fled after the slaying, but voluntarily surrendered to authorities eight days later with assurances that she would not be returned to Beaufort County but would be held at the Correctional Center for Women in Raleigh.

She has recently been free on $115,000 bond posted by the Southern Poverty Law Center of Montgomery, Ala., and the Joan Little Defense Fund of Durham, N.C.

The prosecution is expected to argue that the slaying was part of an escape plot. Prosecutors have said Miss Little took the murder weapon — an icepick — from the jailer's desk when he let her out of her cell to use a telephone in his office earlier in the evening. They said she later lured Alligood to her cell and stabbed him 11 times.

A medical examiner's report said semen was encrusted on the thigh of the jailer's body, which was found naked from the waist down.

It should have read plaintiff motion for change of venue was overruled.

Correction

It should have read plaintiff motion for change of venue was overruled.

Commemorative issues

Joint space flight honored

FRANKLIN CENTER, Pa.,—In honor of the first joint manned space flight by the United States and the Soviet Union, The Franklin Mint will issue a special limited edition commemorative.

The historic issue--The Partners in Space Commemorative--will consist of two unique stamps and cancellations--one American and one Soviet–plus a solid sterling silver proof medal. Each stamp will portray the American and Russian spacecraft at the precise moment of linkup in space. Both the U.S. and Soviet stamps will be cancelled on the day of the Apollo-Soyuz linkup, scheduled for July 17.

The Soviet stamp will bear an illustration produced from an original painting by cosmonaut Alexei Leonov, commander of the Soyuz spacecraft. The stamp will be cancelled at the Soviet launching site at Baikonur, Kazakhstan, in the Soviet Union.

The Special Soviet stamp and cancellation will appear together only as part of this commemorative. This combination will not be available through the Soviet postal authorities or from stamp dealers anywhere.

The U.S. stamp, designed by the noted aerospace artist Robert T. McCall, will be postmarked at Kennedy Space Center, Fla., where the Apollo will be launched, and will feature a special pictorial postmark.

The proof medal will portray all five crewmen of the joint flight–U.S. astronauts Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald K. Slayton, and Soviet cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valery Kubasov--with the designation "Partners in Space" inscribed in English and Russian.

The reverse of the medal will bear the official symbol of the Apollo-Soyuz mission with the names of the five crewmen.

"The Apollo-Soyuz mission is certain to bs a milestone in mankind's exploration of space," said Francis D. Margulies, executive vice president of The Franklin Mint. "This commemorative will be an enduring testimonial to the significance of this mission, not only in our time, but in future generations."

The issue price of The Partners in Space Commemorative is $25, with a limit of one per order. The total number of commemorative is $25, with a limit of one per order. The total number of commemoratives to be issued will be limited to the exact number ordered by the deadline date of July 17, 1975. Orders bearing later postmarks will be returned.

Orders for the Apollo-Soyuz commemorative should be sent directly to The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, Pa. 19091.

Commemorative issues

Joint space flight honored

FRANKLIN CENTER, Pa.,—In honor of the first joint manned space flight by the United States and the Soviet Union, The Franklin Mint will issue a special limited edition commemorative.

The historic issue--The Partners in Space Commemorative--will consist of two unique stamps and cancellations--one American and one Soviet--plus a solid sterling silver proof medal. Each stamp will portray the American and Russian spacecraft at the precise moment of linkup in space. Both the U.S. and Soviet stamps will be cancelled on the day of the Apollo-Soyuz linkup, scheduled for July 17.

The Soviet stamp will bear an illustration produced from an original painting by cosmonaut Alexei Leonov, commander of the Soyuz spacecraft. The stamp will be cancelled at the Soviet launching site at Baikonur, Kazakhstan, in the Soviet Union.

The Special Soviet stamp and cancellation will appear together only as part of this commemorative. This combination will not be available through the Soviet postal authorities or from stamp dealers anywhere.

The U.S. stamp, designed by the noted aerospace artist Robert T. McCall, will be postmarked at Kennedy Space Center, Fla., where the Apollo will be launched, and will feature a special pictorial postmark.

The proof medal will portray all five crewmen of the joint flight--U.S. astronauts Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald K. Slayton, and Soviet cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valery Kubasov--with the designation "Partners in Space" inscribed in English and Russian.

The reverse of the medal will bear the official symbol of the Apollo-Soyuz mission with the names of the five crewmen.

"The Apollo-Soyuz mission is certain to bs a milestone in mankind's exploration of space," said Francis D. Margulies, executive vice president of The Franklin Mint. "This commemorative will be an enduring testimonial to the significance of this mission, not only in our time, but in future generations."

The issue price of The Partners in Space Commemorative is $25, with a limit of one per order. The total number of commemoratives is $25, with a limit of one per order. The total number of commemoratives to be issued will be limited to the exact number ordered by the deadline date of July 17, 1975. Orders bearing later postmarks will be returned.
